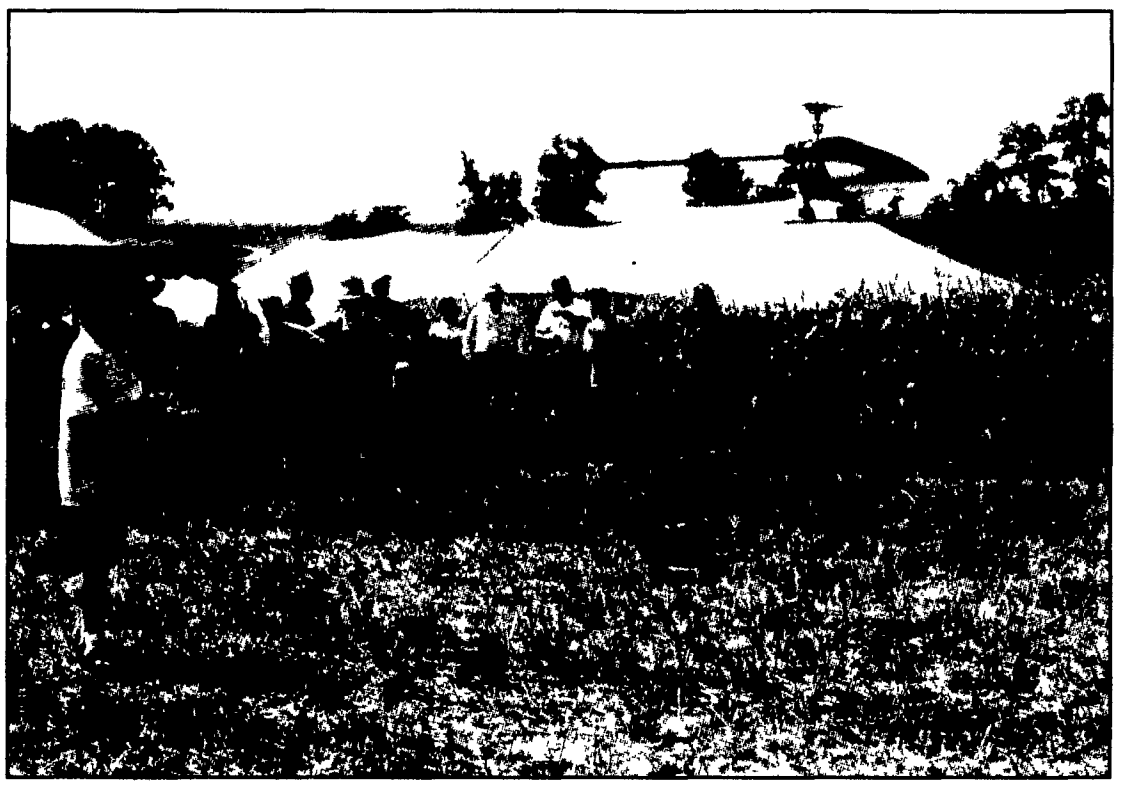
Chopper 'Checks Out' Farm Fields



HOLTWOOD (Lancaster Co.) — Larry Smith, remotely piloted vehicle (RPV) aerial photographer, left, uses a radio control stick to guide a miniature helicopter over the crowd gathered Wednesday morning at Steve Groff's eighth annual Farm Field Day. Smith says he can use the helicopter to hover over fields to take video or still photos of weeds or other field activity. Smith can guide the chopper "as far as I can see," he said. Economist: Major Changes Unlikely In 2002 Farm Bill

DAVE LEFEVER

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — While national farm and commodity groups lobby U.S. lawmakers for a 2002 Farm Bill they hope will meet their needs, the new bill will probably not differ greatly from the current one, according to Penn State ag economics professor James Dunn.

"It's difficult for it to change very much," Dunn said. "It's so big and complicated."

The U.S. House Agriculture Committee recently unveiled a bill proposal drafted by Chairman Larry Combest (R-Texas) and Charlie Stenholm (D-Texas).

Because of the complexities involved, and because legislators do not want to risk alienating large portions of their constituency, "They make changes at the margins (of the bill)," Dunn said.

One major question for Pennsylvania dairy farmers, however, is whether or not the new bill will continue to mandate milk price supports as an "insurance policy against low prices," he said.

The current Farm Bill, passed in 1996, called for milk price supports to end in 2000. However, because of low milk prices last year, supplemental federal funds were released to keep the

Editor's Note: This article will update interested readers on a story published Feb. 10 this year in Lancaster Farming. It concerns a businessman from the country of Belgium who ordered harnesses to be made by Amish harnessmakers in Somerset County. In Belgium on Aug. 28, the harnesses will be used in a 76-horse hitch to set a new record and break the current one of a 56-horse hitch in the Guinness Book of World Records.

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Many readers have never been a student at Penn State University. Regardless, Dean Girton, president of the Penn State Ag Council, said of the land grant university, "This is your university, and we want to be relevant to meet your (consumer and agriculturists) needs."

Last week, the Penn State Agriculture Council presented a daylong session on food safety and emerging diseases and the research protecting agriculture and consumers. Participants toured Penn State's research facility and sat in several classrooms and labs to hear about the work.

The food science department had been formed in 1975, and

Which Came First: Hen Or Hatchery?

Although Hen Has History, Hatchery Has Volume

ELIZABETHTOWN (Lancaster Co.) — A visitor pulling up to Longenecker Hatchery, Inc., located here, should have little doubt as to what resides inside. The chirping of thousands of fluffy chicks is unmistakable.

The hatchery brings 36,000,000 chicks into the world every year to fill the demand for broilers.

The independent hatchery markets four strains of chicks, since each customer works with a different weight level — from 4-5.5 pounds — age, or conformation for their own market.

"We chose a bird that would be the most efficient for each one of those categories," said John Martin, president.

"In the late '40s and early '50s, it would take 16 weeks to produce a four-pound bird. It now takes less than six weeks with a lesser amount of feed to reach that because of genetics and nutrition," said Martin, who pointed out that chicken

ATLANTA, GA.
July 25, 2001
Report Supplied By USDA

Trucklot buying activity was only fair at best during midweek trading as most dealers continued to limit purchases to most immediate needs. Offerings of bone-in breasts were well balanced and boneless-skinless breasts were clearing satisfactorily. Wings were at least adequate, and drums and thighs were available. Leg quarters were well cleared. Retail and distributive movement was no better than fair, however, good seasonal pickup was noted into fast food channels. The market tone remained steady on breast items, about steady on the balance.

Daily National Grain Market Summary

St. Joseph, MO
July 23, 2001
Report Supplied By USDA

Grain and soybean bids regained some of Friday's sharp losses. Good weekly export inspection figures were reported for all commodities how- ever wheat and bean numbers substantially higher than expected. Wheat 1 to 3 cents higher except St. Louis 2 cents lower. Corn steady to 1 cent higher. Sorghum steady. Soybeans 5 to 12 cents higher.

Light support was seen in wheat bids due to better than expected ex- port inspection numbers last week, up 1.8 million bushels. Trade corrections were made in corn pits after sharp declines were seen Friday.

The 40 million bushel figure for export inspections was a positive factor. High temperatures continued in the Western Corn Belt areas last week and forecast call for more this week. Crops are looking good at this time but triple digit temperatures increase stress levels. A very good overnight export soybean sale was announced but no destination has been confirmed.

Good weekly export inspection numbers also offered strength to bean bids. Grains inspected for export for week ended July 22, 2001: Wheat totaled 15.3 million bushels, up 1.8, corn 40.0, down 5.7, sorghum 2.4, up 1.3, and soybeans 9.8 million bushels, up 1.8 million bushels compared to a week ago. Year to Date: Wheat totaled 106.9, up 37.0, Corn 1585.0, down 100.7, sorghum 166.7, down 24.7, and soybeans 951.3, Up 38.1. Crop marketing years begin June 1 for wheat and September 1 for corn, sorghum, and soybeans.

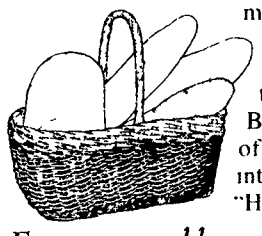
The OLD FARMER'S THIS WEEK WITH ALMANAC

JULY 30–AUGUST 5, 2001

FULL GREEN CORN MOON, AUGUST 4

LAMMAS DAY

From the Old English word meaning "loaf" and "mass," Lammas Day (August 1) was an early blessing of the harvest, especially the first grains It was traditional to bring a new loaf of bread to the local church or to the landlord as an offering of the first fruits of one's labors Lammas was one of the quarter-days marked for the payment of rents Some historians associate Lammas Day with festivities relating to John Barleycorn, a personification of the barley grain that goes into making malt beverages at "Hlaefmaest," or Lammas-tide



For every problem, there is a solution that is simple, neat, and wrong.

–H L Mencken (1880–1956)

TIP OF THE WEEK

Open your house to breezes at the coolest part of the evening, then close it up and draw the shades before the temperature starts to rise.

OPINION

Spend It At The Fair

By now some of you should be receiving the much-anticipated and welcome President Bush tax refund.

We read in the July/August 2001 newsletter, Rural Perspectives, published by the Center For Rural Pennsylvania, that between 1994-2000, real bank deposits declined by $734 million in rural Pennsylvania.

But many economists claim that rural Pennsylvania population continues to grow.

This trend toward lower bank deposits is frightening. Some economists insist that, essentially, Americans aren't saving any money anymore. We're in a debt economy.

So, if you're not going to save the money, at least spend it wisely to pay off debts. Any extra can go to . . . fairs.

Fair season is under way, with coverage of Shippensburg and Kimberton this week. Next week is Lebanon Fair.

At fairs, many rural organizations provide exhibits and, along with those exhibits, food (and other items). Spending some of that money to help these organizations at the fairs would be a great way to put some of that multibillion-dollar tax money to good use.

Speaking of food, did you know, according to the USDA Economic Research Service (ERS), that the typical urban household, in 1997, spent only slightly more money on food at home ($1,126) and slightly less on food away from home ($641) compared to 1998 ($1,094 at home and $679 away)?

(That information came by way of the July 2001 ERS Information newsletter.)

Economists have insisted that we spend about half of our income on food away from home. We wonder how many times we spend our "eating outside the home" at the fair?

Now Is The Time

To List Your Farm Enterprise On AgMap

Penn State has developed AgMap, formerly known as AgNet, to enable consumers, farmers, and businesses to find local producers of various agricultural commodities.

AgMap is a Website with a Web-enabled database linked to a geographic information system. The Land Analysis Laboratory at Penn State will maintain the database. This system will allow you to search for farms and farm products based on how close they are to you. It will also enable potential customers who are looking for products you can provide to locate your operation.

AgMap will allow these consumers to search for agricultural services based on products, location, and service types. Potential customers will be able to find places off the beaten track that offer locally grown produce, trees, and other products. For instance, if you were looking for a farm where you could pick your own produce, you could visit the AgMap Website, enter your home location, and ask for a search of all strawberry growers within a 20-mile radius.

AgMap will then supply you with a list of all the farms that meet your criteria and a map showing how to get there.

In addition to helping consumers and farmers find each other, AgMap provides a communications network among agricultural businesses in Pennsylvania. This allows producers to contact other producers who offer similar products. This provides several benefits.

For market analysis, businesses can use AgMap to determine locations of competitors and find gaps in services where a new business startup may be successful. In emergency situations such as drought, producers with products for sale will be able to locate other producers who need products. In the case of disease outbreaks, producers will able to contact other producers to determine how they are dealing with the situation.

Those farm markets that are listed in the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture's Farm Market directory will be contacted in the near future to see if they wish to be also listed in the AgMap database. Participation is voluntary. Information that will be listed on the Website includes business name and owner name, address, products, hours of business, Website, e-mail address, and phone number. Once you are entered you will receive a user name and password to allow you to change data and to enter additional data as the database is expanded for each commodity. Anyone who is a farm producer can put his or her information in the database. You do not need to be listed in the PDA directory.

For more information on entering your farm business on AgMap, contact Stewart Bruce at (814)-863-7609.

To Prepare For Drought

Recent dry weather has raised concerns about the condition of crops across the state. As is often the case during dry weather, the rains have been very spotty, so some areas are seriously dry while others are just showing the first signs of stress. Although there is still time for a few rains to dramatically change our situation, it is wise to begin planning to deal with drought.

If you have a livestock operation with large forage needs, you may want to line up potential sources of feed from those who may have some to market. You also should evaluate planting some fall forage crops to supplement your supply. If you are a corn grain producer, it would be wise to explore options for marketing your crop as silage this year.

Quote of the Week:

"No occupation is so delightful to me as the culture of the Earth and no culture comparable to that of the garden."

Proverbs 21:2,3.

The bottom line seems to have become the supreme measure of everything in our society today.

Essentially, this is a good approach when we are evaluating something and trying to make a decision. The bottom line is where we come out when we've added and subtracted everything else. It is also axiomatic that the bottom line must prove that whatever it is we are considering must be cost-effective or return the maximum profit.

The problem with this approach is that it becomes the only approach. It is good to calculate the bottom line, to determine whether what we are putting into something will bring appropriate results. The fact is, however, that there are times when we must go beyond the bottom line and do things that are neither profitable nor cost effective.

Some time ago I got a communication from a denominational office informing me that it had been determined that it was no longer "cost effective" to provide retired ministers with health insurance. I must confess that the letter and its rationale bothered me. During the 40-plus years that I served churches in that conference and paid into the health insurance program, I never heard any of my colleagues complain because they were working for salaries that were not "cost effective" — nor did I. We all knew when we decided for the ministry that salaries would be quite substandard, but we also were convinced that there are things worth more than monetary remuneration.

Neither low salaries or inadequate pensions have changed that conviction.

Different Values

I still believe that, but I am sorry that so much of our society today does not. Value and motivation today are so wholly pegged to monetary value.

With my undergraduate education in finance and commerce, I have always advocated financial responsibility, matching outgo with income and profit with loss.

But I personally know of two churches that would not have been built if we had based our plans solely on our financial prospects. I can think of a lot of worthwhile things we did that would not have been done if we had not taken a leap of faith.

Many people today say that it is not "cost effective" to pursue justice and equity for all. I was troubled when I read in the newspaper today of 700 employees being laid off from their jobs in a firm whose profits have been sliding; yet, at the same time, the board of directors paid an enormous bonus and stock options to their CEO.

So, Micah does not seem out of date: "Hear this, you heads of the house of Jacob and rulers of the house of Israel, who abhor justice and pervert all equity, who build Zion with blood and Jerusalem with wrong. Its heads give judgment for a bribe, its priests teach for hire, its prophets divine for money; yet they lean upon the Lord and say, 'Is not the Lord in the midst of us?'" (3:9-11).

Well, it's all cost-effective, isn't it?

What Pleases God?

"With what shall I come before the Lord, and bow myself before God on high? Shall I come before with burnt offerings? Will the Lord be pleased with thousands of rams? . . . Shall I give my firstborn for my transgression, the fruit of my body for the sin of my soul?" Lord, just what is the bottom line you want?

Actually, when we come before the Lord, it is a time for going beyond the bottom line, beyond being cost effective. There are times to be a bean counter and there are times when we are called to the unprofitable and supreme cost of the cross.

The bottom line? We already know, don't we? "He has showed you, O man, what is good; and what does the Lord require of you but to do justice, and to love kindness, and to walk humbly with your God" (6:8). If you can manage that, you don't have to count the cost.

- Cow numbers rising.
- Butter market rebounds.

USDA reported June milk production in 20-select states was 12.0 billion pounds, down just 0.5 percent. The gap between milk production now and a year ago appears to be narrowing. Recall that milk production growth the first quarter of last year was in the 3-5 percent range.

Production per cow in June for 20-select states averaged 1,552 pounds, 5 pounds above a year ago. Thus production per cow appears to be rebounding. And June cow numbers for 20-select states was 7.75 million head, 2,000 head more than May 2001. Thus cow numbers are beginning to rise.

If the milk supply stays on trend, milk production may rise above year-ago levels in the next few months. This assumes the summer weather remains "average" and we avoid unusually hot and humid weather or drought conditions. The spring has been unusually cool in the Northeast, resulting in a small rebound in productivity. Second-cutting hay in the Northeast was reported to be very good. It's just a bit dry, however, at the moment.

Milk growth in June was strongest in the West (California up 3.2 percent, Idaho up 5.7 percent, and New Mexico up 5.6 percent). These Western states also showed growth in cow numbers. Growth was also strong in Indiana (up 17.1 percent) and Kentucky (up 5.3 percent). Production growth was down just about everywhere else, particularly in Texas (down 9.9 percent), Missouri (down 9.1 percent), and Arizona (down 7.7 percent).

USDA reported the advanced pricing factors for August Class I and II milk (skim only) today. This was based on two-week product price averages from July (butter: $1.9364 per pound, nonfat dry milk: $0.9730, cheese: $1.6521, and dry whey: $0.2874). These prices produced an advanced skim milk pricing factor of $7.90 per CWT for Class III and $7.50 per CWT for Class IV.

The base skim milk price, used in the Class I price formula, was equal to the higher of these two prices, or $7.90 per CWT. This is the first month since federal order reform that the advanced Class III skim price exceeded the Class IV price. This was no doubt due to the declining nonfat dry milk prices caused by the butter/powder tilt, as well as strong cheese prices.

The Cold Storage report was also released recently. It indicated that butter stocks in public warehouses grew from 132.4 million pounds in May 2001 to 148.2 million in June. June butter stocks grew 2 percent ahead of a year ago. American cheese inventories grew from 505.6 million pounds in May to 529.1 million pounds in June 2001. June inventories, however, were 11 percent below a year ago. Other Natural cheese inventories in June were 7 percent below a year ago.

Reduced inventories of cheese are holding wholesale prices at current levels. Prices for 40-pound block cheese at the Chicago Mercantile Exchange remained at $1.67 per pound this week. Butter rebounded a bit this week, rising from $1.8025 per pound on Monday, July 16 to $1.8650 by Friday, July 20. Butter prices may weaken in the weeks ahead in reaction to the Cold Storage report and if the milk supply continues to grow.

producers do not use steroids or hormones to promote growth.

Incubation Period

At the farm, the eggs are gathered throughout the day and carefully placed in the flat so the pointed side is down. The chick will not develop correctly or hatch if the larger end, the end with an air pocket, is on the bottom.

The eggs are stored in a 65-degree egg room.

"It is important that the eggs are cooled down right away so that everything that arrives here is at the same stage of development — which is basically nothing," said Daryl Hilsher, vice president.

When they reach the processors, the eggs are transferred to incubator racks and placed in one of the 34 multi-stage incubators, which are never empty. The newest eggs are at the front of the incubators while the 18-day-old eggs are in the back.

"It's just a big cycle," said Hilsher. There can be five "sets" of eggs in the incubator at one time.

The eggs are set for orders — an average of 225,000 a day — for customers that communicate to the hatchery the number of chickens they are projected to need, according to Martin.

"We need to know close to a year ahead what breeds and what numbers they want," he said.

Each incubator holds 65,000 eggs in their 99-degree home. The temperature is slightly lower, however, where the more mature embryos are located since the embryos shed heat and carbon dioxide.

The heat and carbon dioxide is exchanged toward the front of the incubator to the eggs that are less developed and need those elements, said Hilsher. Consequently, little heat has to be added to the incubator. In addition, fresh air is brought in to give the eggs necessary oxygen.

Perched on a plastic flat with holes for airflow, necessary for the health of the chick, the eggs are turned every hour until they are 14-16 days "to keep the embryo freed up inside the shell, so it doesn't attach to the side of the egg. Turning the eggs duplicates what the hen would do on the nest," said Martin.

The chicks can safely "pip out," or come out of the shell, in hatching baskets — where they are transferred when they are ready to hatch.

Additionally, they are moved from the racks to the hatching baskets so they do not contaminate the other eggs by releasing chick dander or bacteria inside of their shell. One hatcher, with its racks of hatching baskets, holds about 11,000 chicks.

Timely Entrance

Careful control of heat and humidity allow the hatchery to time the hatchings precisely.

"It is timed exactly. We can pretty well say that if all the eggs in the incubator at 3 a.m. on Friday they're going to be ready to pull at 3 a.m. in three weeks," said Hilsher.

A sensitive alarm and back-up alarm sounds and eventually dials a pager if the temperature or humidity changes. Chicks can stand a fluctuation in humidity but will not tolerate too much heat, said Hilsher.

An employee, whether the night-watch shift or a tenant of the property, is on duty at all times to ensure that the alarm and incubators are checked.

The new-to-the-world chicks will move out on the first shift. The eggs are set through the night hours, beginning at midnight, because the chicks are pulled from their hatching baskets throughout the day three weeks later.

The day at the hatchery begins at 7 a.m. when employees pull carts full of chicks to the processing room. The chicks are separated from the eggs and then vaccinated. Most of the orders are sent out as a "straight run," or males and females together, with 100 in each box, then delivered to the farm. The hatchery can process 25,000 chicks an hour from the hatching basket to the truck.

Besides a vaccination under the skin, the chicks are sprayed with a vaccine as they are loaded onto the truck.

On The Farm: The Laying Flock

The parent stock is purchased from primary breeding companies, usually from the South. Crossing the parent stock yields a hybrid that the hatchery uses to lay the eggs.

Many of the breeder houses are on a family farm in conjunction with another livestock operation. "Many of them utilize family members to help take care of the breeders," said Martin.

According to Martin, more producers are exploring niche markets for value-added products. "If you are producing the same chicken as everyone else, you have a lot more competition," said Martin.

Broilers

Since a full cycle of putting the chicks in, raising them to maturity, sending them to the processor, and readying the house only takes eight to nine weeks, demand for chicks is brisk. Most of the customers are located within a 50-mile radius to the hatchery.

The chicks are sent to the farm in boxes of 100.

NEED HIGH QUALITY FORAGE?

Use GREEN SPIRIT RYEGRASS as a cover/forage crop after corn silage

GREEN SPIRIT has higher quality than rye, triticale or wheat if cut before boot stage. Is actually a better feed than alfalfa. Has more digestible fiber and sugars. Does not head out until approximately May 12. Cut GREEN SPIRIT mid April and it will be ready again 3 weeks later. Yes, that's 2 cuttings of GREEN SPIRIT and still time to plant corn. So if you have moisture in the ground, no-till GREEN SPIRIT into your worn out alfalfa fields after 3rd or 4th cutting and still get a good cutting or two this fall, and lots of tonnage next spring.

Farmers Honored With Clean Water Farm Award

DEP and the Pennsylvania Association of Conservation Districts Inc. (PACD) are honoring two farms in the Chesapeake Bay watershed that have excelled in water-quality protection.

"These awards celebrate our farmers who are at the forefront in pursuing better farm-management practices and working hard to protect local stream, groundwater and soil resources," DEP Secretary David E. Hess said. "Good stewards make good neighbors, and our neighbors downstream in the Chesapeake Bay appreciate their efforts."

The Pennsylvania Chesapeake Bay Clean Water Farm Awards highlight the positive practices farmers are using in the watershed to help protect water quality, and to spread the word to other farmers about the benefits of water-quality protection.

"The efforts of these farmers complement Gov. Tom Ridge's 'Growing Greener' program by helping to protect and restore waterways that are part of larger watersheds," Hess said.

The award recipients are from Lebanon and Luzerne counties. They were recognized at the PACD annual Conservation Awards Program in State College, Centre County.

Farmers must meet criteria regarding soil testing, manure testing, nutrient management, pesticide management and conservation practices. They are nominated by county conservation districts.

Farmers who demonstrate outstanding farm management receive a large "Clean Water Farm Award" sign to erect on their property, demonstrating their commitment to protecting local and Chesapeake Bay water quality.

Recipients are:

• Lebanon County — Charles and Marlene Bomgardner of North Annville Township. The Bomgardners manage 177 acres of cropland, and an additional two acres of pasture on their Lebanon County farm. Crops produced include corn, alfalfa, soybeans, wheat and barley. They also raise hogs (300) and replacement heifers (50).

The Bomgardner Farm is preserved under the Lebanon County Agricultural Land Preservation Program. As part of the program requirements, the Bomgardners implement a soil-conservation plan that calls for conservation practices, including contour strip cropping, minimum tillage, no-till corn farming, cover cropping and grass waterways.

In addition to the plan requirements, the Bomgardners have voluntarily taken measures to help protect water quality. They have fenced off a spring near their farm's exercise lot and allowed the area to grow into a vegetated buffer and stabilized a walkway built above the spring to help prevent water contamination. The Bomgardners also chose to adopt an Act 6 nutrient-management plan for their farm, although their farm is not considered a Concentrated Animal Operation (CAO), and is not required to have a nutrient-management plan; and • Luzerne County — Mark Verbyla of Sweet Valley — Verbyla manages a 120-acre dairy farm with 65 Holstein cows and 55 replacement animals. He also grows silage, oats and hay.

The headwaters of Huntington Creek flow directly through the Verbyla Farm, and, in recent years, significant steps have been taken to improve water quality in the creek. In 1997, Verbyla voluntarily developed a nutrient-management plan. The plan is followed to ensure the proper applications and use of manure and waste nutrients, and has drastically improved the quality of Huntington Creek, as well as Verbyla's farming operations.

"The nutrient-management plan has made a 100 percent improvement on the well-being of the cows and the health of the stream running through the farm," Verbyla said. "Basically, the plan has changed the whole appearance of the farm. The cows aren't in the mud anymore, the water is protected by a buffer zone, and the farm just looks better."

The farm features two dairy cattle exercise lots, between the barn and Huntington Creek. A buffer strip has been installed between the lots and the creek to filter any excess nutrients that may leave the lot. Verbyla also has installed roof runoff-control devices to divert clean water away from the exercise lots. He has installed additional water-control structures and constructed a stone-centered walkway to carry water to the filter area.

Another device critical to protecting water quality is the farm's milkhouse waste system that collects water used for dairy farm procedures and discharges it into a manure spreader to be spread onto the fields.

Northeast Order Uniform Milk Price For June 2001

BOSTON, Mass. — Erik F. Rasmussen, market administrator for the Northeast Marketing Area, has announced that the statistical uniform price paid by milk dealers (handlers) regulated under the Northeast Order for June 2001 is $17.08 per hundredweight ($1.47 per gallon) for milk delivered to plants located in Suffolk County, Mass. (Boston). The June statistical uniform price is $16.98 for delivery to plants in New York, N.Y. and $16.88 for delivery to plants in Philadelphia. The statistical uniform price is the benchmark minimum producer blend price paid to dairy farmers, prior to allowable deductions, for milk containing 3.5 percent butterfat, 2.99 percent protein, and 5.69 percent other solids. The price received by an individual dairy farmer will vary as the component composition of a farm's milk differs from the established benchmarks and by the location of the plant(s) to which the farm's milk is delivered.

Mr. Rasmussen also stated that the producer price differential (PPD) for June is $2.06 per hundredweight for milk delivered to plants located in Suffolk County, Mass. The PPD represents each producer's share of the value generated by the marketwide pool on a hundredweight basis. The PPD, which is added to the payment producers receive for their milk's components, is adjusted for the location of the receiving plant. The statistical uniform price and PPD decrease by scheduled amounts the more distant the plant receiving producer milk is from Suffolk County, Mass.

The class prices for milk pooled in June are as follows: Class I, $18.24 (Suffolk County, Mass.); Class II, $16.05; Class III, $15.02; and Class IV, $15.33. Comparable prices for June 2000 were: Class I $14.95; Class II $13.08; Class III $9.46; and Class IV price $12.38. The component values for June are protein, $2.1670 per pound; butterfat, $2.2089 per pound; other solids, $0.1409 per pound; and nonfat solids, $0.8748 per pound.

Milk receipts from producers totaled 2.067 billion pounds. Class I utilization, milk processed as beverage milk, was 40.7 percent of producer milk receipts. The average Class I utilization was 42.1 percent in June 2000.

The manufacture of Class II products such as cream, ice cream, yogurt, and cottage cheese utilized 15.6 percent of producer milk. Milk used to manufacture Class III products such as cheese (American and Italian) and evaporated and condensed products utilized 34.0 percent of total milk receipts. Class IV usage (butter, nonfat and whole milk powder) equaled 9.7 percent of the total.

Northeast DFA Sends Two Couples To National Conference

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — Dairy Farmers of America (DFA) Northeast Council, based in Syracuse, N.Y., sponsored two Young Cooperator couples to attend the National Institute on Cooperative Education (NICE), July 22-25 in Atlanta, Ga.

Couples chosen are producers Stephen and Christina Henning from Mehoopany; and Adelia Pimm and Thomas Dayton from Canewango Valley, N.Y. The couples were chosen as a result of their involvement in DFA's Young Cooperative (YC) program.

The Northeast Council of DFA represents more than 2,400 dairy producer members who market more than 2.2 billion pounds of milk cooperatively. The Northeast Council, encompassing seven northeastern states, is one of DFA's seven marketing and membership areas serving local member and customer needs. Overall, DFA is working for 27,000 dairy producers/members in 45 states, with an annual marketing and processing rate of 44.7 billion pounds of milk.

The DFA Young Cooperator program is an educational program, providing farmers ages 18-40, with the development of personal and leadership skills that can be utilized at home, on the farm, in the cooperative, and within the community.

Capitol Region Agronomy Team Report

OATS AS A SUPPLEMENTAL FORAGE CROP

Paul H. Craig, CCA
Extension Agent
Forages, Dauphin County

Indicators from across the Capitol Region reflect the high probability that present forage supplies are short.

Alfalfa weevil feeding significantly impacted yields of first cutting alfalfa and second cutting was reduced by dry soil conditions. Third cutting looks great but this harvest does not make up a large percentage of total yields.

Forage grasses yields were variable. Yields of good quality grasses are the exception. Many stands reached maturity very rapidly because of dry conditions and high temperatures in May.

The loss of timothy production from the cereal rust mite has also increased in the region.

Armyworms have decimated forage grass stands and regrowth. Only in grazing situations can the forage supply be considered as average or a little better. What's a producer to do now?

Summer seeded oats is one crop that could be included in a supplemental forage program at this time. Planted in early to mid-August, with adequate fertility and soil moisture, oats have the potential to produce a high yielding forage with the potential for excellent feed quality. Yields from farmer trials, using bin-run seeds have produced 2.9 tons/acre of dry matter after 60 days of development.

In one trial, the silage tested 11.2 percent crude protein with ADF levels of 33.2 percent and NDF levels at 59 percent. This silage was harvested during the dough stage of development and had a TDN of 65 percent. Different levels of all forage quality indicators would vary greatly by the stage of maturity at harvest.

Summer seeded oats, early to mid-August, can be planted in small grain stubble fields following manure applications and tillage. This practice also helps to reduce perennial weed pressures and serves as a place to put manures. In this situation, two to three bushels per acre of oats will provide good forage in approximately 60 days.

Another place many growers have sown oats is into pastures with a no-till drill. If seeding into a pasture, seeding rates should be reduced to one to two bushels per acre to reduce negatively affecting long term pasture stands. There is no need to purchase, seed quality oats. Bin run seeds, with a check of germination, can provide great stands and yields. If manure is not applied before establishment, the application of 50 to 60 pounds of Nitrogen fertilizer is recommended.

Oats can be harvested at any stage of development; in fact, many growers will stagger plantings from early August until September. Harvesting as silage is probably most common as good hay drying weather in October is not the norm. Grazing is another method for harvesting and helps to stretch out stored forages. Using a "break" wire to limit access will prevent too much wasting of the forage.

A few growers have sown oats and rye, wheat or barley in combination. Their goal was to have a forage crop to harvest in the fall (oats) and then a second crop next spring. Results have indicated that sowing winter grains too early in the summer period (early August) was not the best practice. If you plan to try this practice, delay seeding wheat, barley or rye until early September with the oats. With an early planting and harvest of early August seeded outs, there would be an opportunity to sow winter grains in October.

Sales Of Animal Health Products Decline Slightly In 2000

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Animal health product sales in the U.S. for 2000 totaled $4.21 billion — a slight decrease of two percent compared to 1999, according to an Animal Health Institute (AHI) 2001 Domestic Sales Survey.

The sales survey is conducted annually by AHI and shows product sales in three major product categories — pharmaceuticals, biologics and feed additives. Total sales for the entire U.S. animal health products industry has also been tabulated based on projections made by AHI using sales data collected from AHI member companies. Sales are for products priced at the manufacturer's level.

Among AHI member companies, sales for products used in livestock and poultry totaled $1.8 billion, while companion animal health product sales totaled $1.5 billion, or 45 percent of total sales. AHI member companies represent approximately 80 percent of the U.S. animal health products industry.

A report compiling sales, research, and development data from 1998-2000 is available from AHI. The report includes total combined sales figures of AHI member companies for ruminant, swine, poultry, companion animal, and equine products, and includes graphical representations of the data. The report is $150 USD: copies can be ordered by calling Marie Gilmore at the Animal Health Institute at (202) 637-2440.

R&D SPENDING

AHI member companies spent more than $418 million to research and develop potential new products and to ensure the safety and effectiveness of existing products in 2000, according to AHI's 2001 Research and Development Survey.

Data was collected and compiled by the Animal Health Institute. Research and development spending is calculated according to the type of product manufactured by AHI's member firms: pharmaceuticals, biologicals, insecticides, and diagnostics.

AHI member companies invested more than 12 percent of total sales revenues in research and development in 2000. Research and development expenditures for the industry have consistently ranged from 12 to 15 percent of product sales in recent years, despite increased uncertainty in the regulatory review process.

AHI members were asked to report "innovative research," or investments in the search for new animal health products, and "defensive research," or revenue spent in support of existing products. In 2000, innovative research expenditures were reported at 362.5 million, representing 87 percent of total R&D spending. The remaining 13 percent went toward defensive research for a total of $55.7 million.

A compilation of surveys from the past three years showing trends in animal health products sales and research and development expenditures is available from AHI. The report includes combined sales figures of AHI members for ruminant, swine, poultry, small animals, and equine products.

Sales totals for these species are broken down as feed additives, biologicals and insecticides, and pharmaceuticals. No further breakdown or tabulations are provided, although the report does track trends for the report categories for 1998, 1999 and 2000. The report is $150 USD: copies can be ordered by calling Marie Gilmore at the Animal Health Institute at (202) 637-2440.

AHI represents the manufacturers of animal health products — the pharmaceuticals, vaccines and feed additives used in modern food production, and the medicines that help keep pets healthy.

NRCS Schedules Listening Session

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The USDA Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) has scheduled six listening sessions throughout the U.S. to hear comments from vendors, producers, and other interested parties regarding private sector vendors providing technical assistance for conservation and nutrient management planning — particularly in reference to animal feeding operations (AFOs) and concentrated animal feeding operations (CAFOs).

A session will be conducted Monday, July 30 from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the Holiday Inn, Francis Scott Key Conference Center. The hotel is located at 5400 Holiday Drive, I-270 at Route 85 in Frederick, Md., (301) 694-7500.

NRCS Chief Pearlie Reed and other state and national leaders will be listening and accepting comments in developing and implementing a comprehensive nutrient management plan (CNMP). The elements of a CNMP such as manure and wastewater handling and storage, land treatment practices, nutrient management, record keeping, feed management, and other wastewater utilization activities can also be discussed.

Are you a farmer who has used consultants to design waste management facilities or for nutrient management planning? Are you a vendor who has provided this service? Was the experience positive? What changes would you suggest? Please plan to attend and share your thoughts. This will be the only session covering the Mid-Atlantic and Northeastern states.

Speakers will be allowed only five minutes. That time limit will be strictly enforced. Written comments will be accepted and speakers are urged to consider providing written comments as well as oral remarks. Please contact Carol Hollingsworth, (443) 482-2902, if you wish to speak, or you may register at the door. Keep in mind that speaking time will be available on a first come-first served basis when registering at the door. Those who have registered in advance will be guaranteed the first opportunity to provide comments.

Questions to think about in preparing your comments could include:

- What do you believe the role of private sector vendors should be in providing technical services to AFO/CAFO owners and operators with the development and/or implementation of their CNMPs? Is there a distinction in the role between regulated CAFOs versus non-regulated AFOs?
- What are the technical capabilities and capacities of private sector vendors in relation to the skills, knowledge, and experience needed to provide technical services associated with the development and/or implementation of CNMPs?
- How do you see the capabilities and capacities of the private sector vendor community changing over the next few years? Over the next decade?
- What would be needed for a successful public/private partnership to facilitate AFO/CAFO owners and operators development and/or implementation of CNMPs?

If you are unable to come to the listening session, written comments can be mailed or faxed to USDA Natural Resources Conservation Service, Thomas Christensen, Animal Husbandry and Clean Water Program Division, 5601 Sunnyside Avenue, Mail Stop 4573, Beltsville, MD 20705. The fax number is (301) 504-2264. Comments will be accepted through Aug. 15.

Agricultural Survey Under Way In Chester County

EXTON (Chester Co.) — Agricultural landowners throughout Chester County have received survey forms from the Chester County Development Council and the Chester County 2020 Trust that will provide valuable information on the business of agriculture in the county and offer insights in ways to promote farming as an economic industry in the county.

"This survey is vital for the future of agriculture in Chester County, one of our most important industries," Gary Smith, executive director of the Chester County Development Council, said. "We're urging everyone who receives this survey to fill it out and return it."

Chester County and many other areas in the region are losing valuable agricultural land to office parks, residential developments and shopping centers. The loss is keenly felt among traditional dairy, hay and livestock farmers as increasing operation costs and falling commodity prices are forcing farmers out of business and off their land.

"Many county residents perceive this change only as a loss of open space and rural vistas," David Davis, president of the Chester County 2020 Trust said, "There is also a significant economic loss. Farming in Chester County is a significant economically valuable industry. We need to understand more about the economics of the county's farming."

The Development Council and 2020 Trust have joined together to complete a comprehensive study of agricultural in Chester County. Funding for the study was provided by the Development Council, the 2020 Trust and Commonwealth money secured by Pennsylvania Senator James Gerlach of Chester County.

The project's goals are to identify public policies and economic policies that can help recognize, measure and promote economically viable agriculture in Chester County. Also, the study should identify ways to build on the land preservation programs of public and private organizations that already exist in the county. Another goal is to identify those public and private agencies, trade organizations and other groups who can champion innovative projects and programs.

In Chester County, more than 36 percent of the county's total acreage is active farming (more than 176,000 acres). There are approximately 1,750 farms, averaging about 101 acres, including 350 commercial dairy farms.

More than 35 percent of the county's farm acreage is in crop production. Because of fertile soil, favorable climate, and advanced farming practices, Chester County ranks #1 in Pennsylvania in crop yield. Chester County also ranks #1 in cash receipts for the sale of agricultural crops and #2 in cash receipts from the sale of livestock and livestock products.

The project has been divided into thee phases. The first is the data gathering, the second is drafting policy and the final phase is the public briefings and presentations to create concrete projects and programs that stakeholders in the agriculture community can participate.

Gene Bazan, a consultant from State College, is coordinating the program, which has been endorsed by the Chester-Delaware County Farm Bureau, The Chester County Agriculture Development Council and The Chester County Agriculture Lands Preservation Board. Members of the Agricultural Advisory Board of the project include: Kevin M. Baer, program coordinator, Chester County Agricultural Development Council and Chester County Agricultural Land Preservation Board; Diana C. Hoopes, program assistant, and Chester County Agricultural Development Council and Chester County Agricultural Land Preservation Board; Scott McIntyre of LF Lambert Spawn Company of Coatesville; Sam Cantrell of Maysie's Farm Conservation Center; David Davis, president of the Chester County 2020 Trust and chair of the Agriculture Study Advisory Board, Peter Hausmann of Terramics Property Company; Joyce Hershey, chair of the Agricultural Development Committee; Dr. Henry Jordan of Claneil Enterprises; William P. Moore of Walmoore Holsteins, Inc.; Molly Morrison of the Natural Lands Trust; Gary Smith, executive director of the Chester County Development Council; Cheryl Fairbairn, extension agent of the Chester County Cooperative Extension; and Henry Thorne, president and CEO of Downingtown National Bank.

Dairy Groups Ask For Hearing

CLEVELAND, Ohio — Continental Dairy Products, Inc., Dairy Farmers of America, Michigan Milk Producers Association, and Prairie Farms Dairy, Inc. have requested that the USDA hold an emergency public hearing to consider proposals to amend the pool plant and producer milk provisions and the method of calculating partial payments in the Mideast Milk Marketing Order.

Interested parties may obtain a copy of the proposals from the market administrator's Office at the following address: Market Administrator, P.O. Box 30128, Cleveland, OH 44130, Telephone (440) 826-3220.

These proposals have not yet been approved for inclusion in a Notice of Hearing. Before deciding whether a hearing should be conducted to consider amending the Mideast Order, the Department is providing interested parties an opportunities to submit additional proposals.

The proposals should be mailed by Aug. 10 to: Deputy Administrator, USDA/AMS/ Dairy Programs, Room 2968-S, P.O. Box 96456, Washington, D.C. 20090-6456.

Each proposal should be accompanied by a brief but comprehensive statement on the need to amend the Mideast Order. The statements will be used in deciding what proposal should be considered if a hearing to amend the order is to be conducted.

If a hearing is called to consider requests to amend the provisions of the Mideast Order, only those proposals included in the hearing notice will be heard. However, appropriate modifications of the proposals included in the hearing notice may be considered at the hearing.

Actions under the federal milk order program are subject to the "Regulatory Flexibility Act." This Act seeks to ensure that, within the statutory authority of a program, the regulatory and informational requirements are tailored to the size and nature of small businesses. For the purpose of the federal order program, a small business will be considered as one which is independently owned and operated and which is not dominant in its field of operation. Most persons subject to a milk order are considered as a small business. Accordingly, interested persons are invited to submit hearing proposals that would carry out the intent of the "Regulatory Flexibility Act."

If the USDA concludes that a hearing should be conducted, all known interested persons will be mailed a copy of the hearing notice. Anyone who desires to present evidence on proposals set forth in the hearing notice will have an opportunity to do so at the hearing.

Once a hearing notice is issued and until the issuance of a final decision, USDA employees involved in the decisional process may not discuss the merits of a proceeding on an ex parte basis with any persons having an interest in the proceeding. For this purpose, the market administrator and his staff are considered to be involved in the decisional process. Thus, it is suggested that any discussions that you may wish to have with USDA personnel regarding hearing proposals be initiated soon. Procedural matters may be discussed at any time.

If you have any questions concerning the filing of the proposals or desire a copy of the present order, please contact the market administrator's office at (440) 826-3220.

Penn State Cooperative Extension Capitol Region Dairy Team

SUMMER DROUGHT CONDITIONS? YES, FOR SOME PRODUCERS
Tim Beck
Regional Dairy Team Coordinator

Tim Beck

Driving around the capitol region, it's easy to see the effects of this year's scattered and spotty rainfall patterns.

Some producers are experiencing drought conditions with severely stressed crops, while neighbors have at times had flash flooding. While there is still hope that late summer rains may salvage some drought-stressed crops, it's not too early to decide how to deal with feed shortfalls and how to manage drought-stressed crops.

It's important we not react too quickly to prematurely harvest drought-stressed crops and lessen their feeding value even further by not allowing adequate time for the crop to mature.

Emergency fall crops may be an option, but if moisture is insufficient for the present crop, it's usually inadequate to germinate seed for an emergency crop as well. Better to get the most feed value from the present crop and wait for fall rains to germinate emergency small grain crops if forage supply becomes limiting.

Moisture-stressed corn and soybeans with reduced grain yield frequently make excellent quality, nutritious silages. Be sure to allow time for drought-stricken corn to reach as much maturity (days from planting) as possible. Whole corn plant moisture should not drop below 60 to 63 percent. Energy and sugar content of the plant will increase with advancing maturity even when no kernels form because of lack of pollination.

Drought-stressed soybeans may be harvested as forage with good results. Wait for as much pod or bean development as possible before harvest to enhance feeding value. Soybeans should be ensiled before dropping below 65 percent moisture. Soybean silage is comparable to a mixed mainly legume silage in nutrient content, although it may not be as palatable. When soybeans lack pod or bean development and are high in moisture, direct cut them and add 100 to 200 pounds of ground grain per ton to provide fermentable carbohydrate and ensure a better silage preservation.

It's important that producers anticipating reduced forage production carefully adjust forage feeding rates without dropping below forage neutral detergent fiber and total fiber intake guidelines. Conventionally fed herds should have forage dry matter intake between 1.40 to 1.60 percent of body weight daily. Heifers need at least 1.2 percent of body weight from forage dry matter.

After assessing forage inventory, if supply appears short, it's not too soon to arrange advance purchases of forages and commodities. One of the few advantages of patchy rainfall patterns is that surplus forage may be available in the local area. It's much easier to ensile a crop at harvest than to try to purchase and transport fermented feeds.

Work witlf your nutritionist to determine forages and commodities most likely to be complementary in nutrient content to existing feed supplies. Pay particular attention to crude protein, neutral detergent fiber, nonstructural carbohydrate, and fat when planning feed purchases.

Once drought-stricken crops have been harvested for silage, consider an August or early September planting of spring oats to be used for fall grazing or silage. Winter grains can be used for forage in the fall (grazing) or the following spring (grazing or silage).

Look for good buys on commodities by comparing their economic value to established standards such as number 2 ear corn, 44 percent soybean meal, and alfalfa hay. Two Excel spreadsheets, "Dairy Forage Template" and "Dairy Grain and Byproduct Template," are available at the dairy cattle nutrition Website. More detailed information on this topic is included in the publication, DAS 97-17, "Feeding During Shortages of Home-Grown Feeds."

Request a copy of these resources from your county extension office or download copies from the Web at http://www.das.psu.edu/dcn/catforg/DAS/index.html For additional information or resources, contact Tim Beck at (717) 840-7408, e-mail tbeck@psu.edu, or fax (717) 755-5968.

Penn State Labs Work To Make Food Safer

Isolated outbreaks of foodborne illnesses and meat that is recalled because of possible contamination send warnings throughout the food industry. In the last several months a massive recall of taco shells was issued because traces of a genetically engineered corn that was approved for animal feed but not human consumption was alleged to have appeared in the shells.

Koushik Seetharaman explained how biotechnology takes a beneficial gene and puts it into a seed such as corn so that less chemicals are needed during the growing season. This puts a new gene into the food, a protein. Although initial findings showed no ill side effects, two major concerns have come to the forefront recently. Is it safe for human consumption and is it environmentally safe?

Some people claimed to have had an allergic reaction to genetically engineered corn. And a few environmentalist groups claimed negative impact on the environment.

According to Seetharam, pollen can drift, depending on the wind, and the genes can potentially combine with plants growing under normal conditions. Once a gene enters a food, it becomes part of it and cannot be removed. "It's a little like gossip," Seetharaman said, of the impossibility of stopping the gene that was initiated.

Tests failed to find any evidence that the genetically engineered food caused food allergy reactions in those that consumed the shells, but their fears caused concern that reactions might not show up until 3-5 years later, when the protein component builds up in the body.

Cornell research had said that the genetically engineered corn was killing butterflies, but other independent studies have not found this correlation.

Technology must be looked at carefully, and with it public education must precede and accompany the utilization of technology. In the past, much of technology was beneficial to farmers, helping them to receive higher yields and better growth. Today technology must consider how it will affect consumers, Seetharam said.

Ali Demirci explains that several methods to destroy microorganisms are needed to ensure a safe food supply.

Dana McElroy, department of food science, talked about public perception on food safety and extension's component in educating the public.

Luke Leborde, extension specialist, works with food service and food safety issues. His department examines food processing.

He said that one well-known pizza chain buys more mushroom in the state than any other industry. The chain wants assurance that the mushrooms they order are safe. They want to know about the manure pathogens.

The labs research methods of killing pathogens without lessening the flavor, appearance, and nutrient content of the food.

Ali Demirci said the department of ag and biological engineering is working with low-heat sterilization of foods. Although heat kills microorganism, not all food can be heated.

Infrared processing, irradiation, and electoheating are some of the methods researched.

Many consumers view irradiation as a new process, but Catherine Cutter, department of food sciences, said that irradiation has been around for more than 100 years. In 1896, scientists discovered that uranium is radioactive and within a few years determined that the y-rays could destroy bacteria in food. FDA has approved the process for some food additives but not all food. During the 1960s-1970s, a big thrust to implement this method was spearheaded by NASA in order to keep food safe in space for long periods of time.

During the last 10 years, much research is being done with irradiation and the meat industry. The method has proven effective to kill pathogens, but a higher cost is attached to the product because food must be shipped to one of five or six food irradiation facilities in the U.S. The food then needs to be repackaged off-site and shipped back for distribution.

Several large meat packaging companies are supposedly planning to purchase irradiation equipment soon in the hopes of cutting the extra charges of shipping and handling.

Irradiation will reduce and in some circumstances eliminate pathogenic microorganisms such as salmonella, E.coli, staphylococcus aureus, listeria monocytogenes, campylobacter

Dana McElroy recommends that consumers with question on food safety, storage, and preparation check the Penn State Food Safety Website http:/ foodsafety.cas.psu.edu.

Participants discuss the use of sensors used by Joseph Irudayaraj to determine food quality, microbial detection, and contaminant determination.

Field Observation Right From Mini-Helicopter At Field Day

ANDY ANDREWS
Editor

HOLTWOOD (Lancaster Co.) — For a second, simply imagine being able to fly around the fields, looking for pests, drought, or disease.

Free as a bird, you can zoom in quickly on some rootworm devastation; or, for an instant, check out a neighboring field where tree or other obstructions make it hard to get to; or, as quick as a hawk, move down to hover next to an alfalfa stand, scanning for insects.

All that's possible with today's technology.

Larry Smith, a man who specializes in remote aerial photography, demonstrated that type of technology. He works for HeliView, based in Lehighton.

The miniature helicopter, running on methanol, took to the skies on the demonstration fields during Steve Groff's eighth annual Farm Field Day Wednesday.

At a cost of about $3,200, the helicopter can be fully equipped with real-time video. A trained operator, according to Smith, can put a set of view goggles on, sit down, and maneuver around the fields — like being in the actual helicopter.

How far can the observer "travel" using this "virtual" observation system? "As far as I can see," Smith said. "When I can't see it (anymore), I'm in deep trouble."

Smith has been working with the helicopter, or remotely piloted vehicle (RPV) system, for about six years. The vehicle, with full-motion video systems from Bolar Heli Research, is fueled by methanol or gasoline and can rise to 500 feet or higher.

Smith has already flown the vehicle around tree tops at golf courses, scouted out and took digital pictures of a roller coaster at Knoebels Amusement Park in Elysburg, and photographed a corn maze in New Jersey.

Agronomic suppliers and crop consultants have looked into technology that would literally put the observer onboard an RPV. Smith's system can hover over a field and look closely at weed species and take digital still photos or real-time video.

The system could be less expensive than using pilots on fixed wing aircraft as field scouts.

Smith said the system uses a 3.3 megapixel digital camera, which can supply glossy color photos of almost anything in the field. Smith has taken photos of golfers at the links, in this case from a relatively high altitude so as not to disturb their golf game, he noted.

With methanol, the RPV can stay in the air about 15 minutes. With gasoline, it can fly for about 45 minutes.

Smith also uses a parafoil system, which uses a lighter-than-air balloon powered by a propeller, for aerial viewing.

But Smith cautions that, if crop advisers or producers want to invest in the RPV aerial system, "it takes a long time to learn," he said.

Smith was quick to caution them.

"You must know what you're doing. You were not born with the coordination to fly the helicopter," he said. "The helicopter is a very, very, very unstable flying machine."

The miniature helicopter can be outfitted with almost any type of camera. Smith claimed he hasn't lost a helicopter while doing work for a customer.

Also at the field day, which drew in more than 400 producers and agribusiness representatives, Les Stark, hemp researcher/historian, demonstrated a "hemp break" which allowed growers long ago to separate the fibers from the woody stalks of a hemp plant.

Chad Shafer fuels the mini-helicopter with alcohol before flight time Wednesday at the Groff field day.

Shawn Lucas, student at the University of Maryland, breaks up the gneiss and schist layers of soil about four to five feet below ground.

Several areas demonstrated the importance of caring for soil and the factors making up good soil. Shawn Lucas, master's degree candidate at University of Maryland, showed the importance of good drainage in soils. He provided students attending the field day with information about soil layering, showing them the gray, sandy gneiss and schist layer, four to five feet down in a trench, and the upper, worm-aerated, areas.

The field day also demonstrated a conservation subtiller and no-till vegetable transplanter.

Kindergartners from Camp Zone, Lancaster, attended with teacher Jessica James, standing at right. They inspected a "soil horizons" exhibit, filling plastic tubes with different soil types, sponsored by the Chester County Conservation District.

5-Year-Old Jersey Takes Supreme At Somerset Junior Show

GAY BROWNLEE
Somerset Co. Correspondent

MEYERSDALE (Somerset Co.) — When her 5-year-old Jersey, Roses Pepper Magic, was named supreme champion recently at the Somerset County Junior Dairy Show, 18-year-old owner Wendy Rose of Hollsopple was delighted with Judge John Burkett's assessment of the cow.

"The Jersey is a cow you can't pick apart," he said. "She's the cow today. She's got the bloom. Her udder is nearly flawless."

Magic is out of HL Duncan Pepper and Roses Hermitage Missy, bred by Shallow Run Farm, New Florence.

Rose reported that several years ago at the same show Missy was also named supreme.

"I like to work with my animals," she said, "and I like the competition."

Matt Mosholder of Rockwood had the grand champion Holstein with Locust-AYR Jolt Sable, a junior 2-year-old. Reserve champion Holstein was Sandyglen Pacific Triple Le, a 5-year-old owned by Luther Hillegass of Berlin.

The Ayrshire grand champion was a senior 3-year-old owned by Nevin Hostetter of Rockwood — Justa Tri Kandy Kane. Hostetter's senior 2-year-old named Nevins Joy was the reserve champion.

In the Brown Swiss breed, Justin Foreman of Rockwood had the grand champion with Swamp Creek Nellie, shown in the 6-years-and-older class. The reserve champion Brown Swiss was owned by Seth Foreman of Rockwood. It was a junior 2-year-old named Swamp Creek Candy.

Kevin Bittner of Berlin had the Guernsey grand champion with a senior 2-year-old named BF Trumpet Becky. Reserve champion Guernsey was Cloverdale Jessie, a spring calf owned by Kara Savage of Salisbury.

Pineybrook Sabre Rizz-Red, a senior 2-year-old owned by Cassandra Knepper of Markleton, was the Red and White grand champion. Knepper also had the reserve champion Red and White with a 5-year-old named Pineybrook Redstar Cindy-Red.

Cranapples Cherry Twin was grand champion and Cranapples Chocolate Twin was reserve champion in the Milking Shorthorn breed. Both are spring calves owned by Meredith Murray of Meyersdale.

Burkett, East Freedom, said, "This is a nice show, a good quality show. These animals can go to districts and stand the competition," he said.

Wal-Mart Meat Division V.P. Keynote Speaker At Midwest Pork Conference

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind.—Pork producers from Ohio, Indiana, Kentucky, Michigan have joined forces to organize the first ever Midwest Pork Conference (MPC), September 6 and 7 at the Indiana State Fair Events Center, Indianapolis, Ind.

"Marketing For Profitability" is the theme for the educational sessions on Friday, September 7. Experts will conduct professional training sessions on maximizing opportunities in a changing market, marketing manure, successful industry marketing ventures, mandatory price reporting, packer profiles, adding value to pork through niche marketing and food safety issues in the pork industry.

Keynote speaker is Ken Parnell, vice president of Wal-Mart's meat division. Parnell will discuss Wal-Mart's meat sales activities and where he sees the future for the meat industry.

Sponsored by the Indiana Pork Producers Association (IPPA), in cooperation with the Ohio, Michigan and Kentucky pork producers associations, the two-day event will focus on professional development for today's pork producer, with a customized trade show time exclusive of other conference events.

"With the World Pork Expo being cancelled because of the foot and mouth disease outbreak in Europe, this is the opportunity for producers from around the Midwest to get together and learn from each other," says Sherrill Rude, MPC Manager.

MPC's trade show will feature more than 250 exhibitors involved in the pork industry. To give MPC participants quality time with exhibitors, the trade show will run from 12:45 p.m. to 5:30 p.m., Thursday and Friday after the educational segments have concluded.

According to Rude, the MPC will offer five different professional development educational tracks producers can participate in. Sessions are planned for each track on both Thursday and Friday. "We've tried to meet the needs of all types of pork operators by picking timely topics and featuring the best experts in the business," adds Rude.

Track 1 sessions are designed for key decision makers in pork operations with multiple employees at different site production facilities.

Track 2 targets the producer who receives a significant portion of their income from pork production and is interested in how to differentiate their operation.

Track 3 sessions focus on contract growers/managers who are looking for new ways to diversify and maximize their income.

Thursday's Track 4 session has been developed for people involved in the office/business management activities in a pork operation.

Friday's Track 4 sessions are geared towards employees interested in upgrading their skills.

In addition, there is a Track 5 session for producers interested in getting a first-hand look at the retail and foodservice industry who utilize pork.

Thursday, September 6, is "Production Technology Day" and feature sessions with industry experts on profitable management of swine facilities, exploring pork production options, new ideas in pork production, employee relations, financial management, swine nutrition, liabilities in pork production, and how to get the best contract.

Other MPC activities include a Ribs N' Bibs golf outing Wednesday afternoon, September 5 before the official conference kickoff. The golf outing will be followed with a Ribs N' Bibs reception at the Indiana State Fairgrounds Exposition Hall.

Thursday evening the "Best of the Midwest" tasting reception will feature new value-added pork products available to consumers.

Friday morning conference attendees can participate in a continental breakfast and learn about new university research projects in the Midwest.

Early-bird registration for all events (before July 31) is $75 and $100 at the time of the conference. For producers interested in attending only one full day of the MPC, registration is $50.

Registration is $25 for producers wishing to attend only the trade show and luncheon. Children ages 6-18 registration is $25. To register for MPC call the registration office at 317-713-1553.

For more information about MPC, contact the Indiana Pork Producers Association at (800-535-2405) or email them at info@midwestpork.com.

Humans And Horses At Risk For Mosquito-Borne Diseases

ANNAPOLIS, Md. — Concern about mosquito-borne disease infecting Maryland's equine animals, ostriches and emus is rising among Maryland Department of Agriculture (MDA) veterinarians. Conditions are favorable for appearance of both Eastern Equine Encephalitis (EEE) and West Nile Viral Encephalitis (WNV) in Maryland and surrounding states this summer. Both viruses are spread by mosquitoes from infected birds to humans, horses, and various species of birds.

Mosquitoes trapped recently on Chincoteague Island, Va. were found infected with EEE virus. Four crows found dead in Baltimore tested positive for WNV, and the disease has been found in New Jersey crows and mosquitoes as well as in mosquitoes trapped in Delaware. Furthermore, large populations of mosquitoes are predicted in all Mid-Atlantic states.

Horses, ponies, donkeys, and mules can be protected from EEE by vaccination, but the vaccines are only effective for six to 12 months. Maryland State Veterinarian, Dr. Roger Olson, urges owners of equine animals, ostriches and emus to take precautionary measures against the diseases and to consult their local veterinarian about vaccination against EEE. It is hoped that a vaccine for WNV will be available for horses later this year. Meanwhile, the risk can be reduced by avoiding exposure to mosquitoes and helping to eliminate breeding sites of mosquitoes.

Recommendations, which can be adapted to protect both horses and humans, include avoiding outdoor activities after dusk, use of insect repellents, eliminating standing water, installing fine mesh screening in windows and doors of homes and stables, and avoiding marshes and wetlands.

People are advised to wear light colored, long sleeved shirts, and long pants. Standing water is the largest source of mosquitoes. Bird baths, used tires, rain gutters, tarps and grill covers, or any other containers should be emptied or flushed to minimize mosquito populations.

Maryland horse owners should be alert for any of the following symptoms in their animals: apprehension, depression, listlessness, trembling, head shaking, lower lip or tongue paralysis, lack of coordination or staggering, weakness of hind legs, paralysis, or sudden death. If any of these symptoms are observed, a veterinarian should be contacted immediately.

More animals recover from WNV than from EEE, but many do not. Some die and others are humanely destroyed because of permanent brain or spinal cord damage. MDA's five Animal Health Laboratories will perform free post mortem examinations including testing for rabies, EEE, WNV, and other neurologic diseases on such cases.

Citizens are advised also to report dead crows, blue jays, or raptors (hawks, owls, etc.) to Maryland's West Nile Virus Call Center at 1-866-866-CROW (2769) from 8 a.m.-8 p.m., Monday-Friday and 10 a.m.-5 p.m. on weekends. General information regarding WNV is also available at that number.

C-SAW Offers Help With Pa. Watershed Grants

PENNSBURG (Montgomery Co.) — Local groups that have received a PA DEP Growing Greener Grant or are interested in improving their application for one can receive free technical assistance from the C-SAW Program.

The Southeastern Pennsylvania Resource Conservation and Development (SEPA RC&D) Council is accepting applications from local groups and municipalities for the C-SAW Program.

C-SAW, Consortium for Scientific Assistance to Watersheds, is a group of technical specialists available to assist on watershed activities.

Arthur B. Holland, SEPA RC&D chairman said, "Help is available for organizations and agencies to gain the knowledge and skills necessary to successfully complete a Growing Greener Grant or prepare an accurate application for a grant."

The Growing Greener Grant Program is part of the Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Protection effort to protect and improve the state's watersheds.

Five organizations are available to help. The participating technical experts are Alliance for Aquatic Resource Monitoring at Dickinson College, Canaan Valley Institute, Delaware Riverkeeper Network, Stroud Water Research Center and the United States Geological Survey. These specialists will not conduct the monitoring or complete the projects, but are available to help identify solutions and provide training to accurately monitor activities.

Some of the services available include: determining watershed issues, selecting appropriate equipment, identifying macroinvertebrates, riparian and stream restoration, and data interpretation. The C-SAW Program is funded by a special Growing Greener Technical Grant. This partnership's free services will be available for the next two years.

Information about the C-SAW Program or to obtain an application for technical help, please visit the project Website, http://pa.water.usgs.gov/csaw. For more information or to submit an application, contact the Southeastern Pennsylvania Resource Conservation Development Council. The office is located in Pennsburg, Montgomery County. Economist: Major Changes price supports in effect after they were due to expire.

Price support funds are not being paid to dairy farmers at this time because of relatively high milk prices.

According to an article recently published by the American Farm Bureau Federation (AFBF), the Combest-Stenholm proposal would extend the current milk price support target of $9.90 per hundredweight.

Federal milk marketing orders, as well as any premiums mandated by state agencies such as the Pennsylvania Milk Marketing Board, fall under separate legislation and will not be effected by any price support legislation (or lack of it) that goes into the Farm Bill.

National budget limitations are another obstacle to agriculture policy reform.

Dr. Bob Young, a policy specialist from the Food and Agricultural Policy Research Institute, warned that falling U.S. budget surpluses could put a crunch on Farm Bill programs, according to a recent AFBF report.

"The budget issue and how much we are going to spend — I think that's going to put us in a real quandary," Young told a group of state Farm Bureau presidents.

The Farm Bill debate will likely include issues such as commodity loan rates, fixed payment rates, and countercyclical payments, he said.

As opposed to fixed payments, countercyclical support would provide relief to farmers only during periods when economic cycles bring about the lowest commodity prices.

The debate on countercyclical support will focus on what type of trigger is used to initiate payments, a decision that Young said is critical to shaping the new policy.

According to the AFBF report, Young made a distinction between assistance for farmers and commodity supports. He urged farm leaders not to focus on how much money is allocated for each commodity, but ensure that producers get the assistance they need.

"The bottom line is what money can we put in producers pockets at the end of the day," Young said.

The AFBF reported that if the proposed plan were enacted, "it would continue much of current law but provide producers with additional income support."

Measures in the draft plan not provided in the 1996 bill include an option for producers to update their base program acres and a proposed 34-cent-per-bushel payment rate for soybeans, the AFBF noted.

Other groups making recommendations for the new bill include the National Farmers Union, American Soybean Association, the Soil and Water Conservation Society, and the National Council of Farmer Cooperatives.

"With a few exceptions, their proposal is much like the current policy that does not serve our nation's family farmers," said Leland Swenson, National Farmers Union (NFU) president. "In the wake of the failure of Freedom to Farm, we need a real change. We must take a simple and understandable approach that is about what farmers are planting today and what their yields are today," he said.

NFU recommendations for the new bill include an improved marketing loan program, a better price support system for milk producers, fair trade initiatives, and a broader range of conservation programs.

Tony Anderson, president of the American Soybean Association (ASA), told the Senate Agriculture Committee that the previous Farm Bill has left an "unfinished agenda."

"Unless key issues are resolved, it will be difficult, if not impossible, to move farm policy beyond the role of a safety net for producers facing disadvantageous conditions, both at home and abroad," Anderson said.

ASA stated that the bill proposal is not equitable to producers of oilseed crops including soybeans, sunflowers, and canola, because loan and payment provisions "do not reflect the value or historical price relations of oilseeds to 'program' crops (such as corn)."

While commending the proposal for several measures including a continued marketing assistance loan program for oilseed producers, ASA also asked that the new bill include measures that enhance U.S. agricultural trade competiveness, increase funding for humanitarian assistance in developing countries, increase funding for agricultural research, ease regulations that increase production costs, provide incentive payments for conservation practices, and continue adequate price and income supports.

Among the groups asking for greater conservation incentives, the Soil and Water Conservation Society (SWCS) proposed that USDA conservation and financial assistance programs be doubled.

"Congress should authorize a minimum of $3 billion annually for a stewardship-based farm and ranch program that rewards producers for utilizing their land labor, and capital to enhance the environment," the SWCS recommended.

The National Council of Farmer Cooperatives (NCFC) has also been lobbying for new farm policy.

"The farmer's share of the consumer food dollar has declined to just 20 cents — its lowest level ever," said David Graves, NCFC president and CEO. "Increasing the farmer's share by just one cent to 21 cents would generate an additional $6 billion in total income."

At the heart of NCFC's proposal is that federal legislation encourage and support farmer-owned businesses. Key recommendations are improving access to capital, clarifying tax laws, revitalizing USDA support, and passing a resolution to support farmer cooperatives.

"To be successful, farmers and their cooperative businesses must be strategically positioned to be able to compete in what clearly is a rapidly changing marketplace," Graves said.

USDA Secretary Ann M. Veneman commended congressmen Combest and Stenholm for their work thus far on the proposal.

"This is an important beginning and a serious response to the needs of our nation, its farmers, ranchers, and citizens," she said.

"(USDA) is currently developing principles related to future food and agriculture policy that meet the objectives outlined by the President, which include ensuring a strong income safety net, pursuing a more market-oriented U.S. farm policy, and opening up new trade opportunities abroad.

"We expect to release these principles in the near future and look forward to working together with Chairman Combest and the committee, as well as the Senate Agriculture Committee, as we address these important issues," Veneman said.

Penn State Labs

Industry will not be allowed to use irradiation to destroy toxins or virus or to cover up badly contaminated food.

"You could probably eat a raw hamburger again," Catherine Cutter said of the time when all meat would be irradiated.

Although the cost to the consumer is higher, market trials show that 30 percent of consumers are willing to pay a premium price to assure they have a safe product, and consumers readily purchased food that FDA has approved for irradiation: spices, herbs, dehydrated vegetables and seasoning mixtures, wheat flour, strawberries, papayas, potatoes, mangos, poultry, and fresh and frozen beef, pork, lamb, and veal.

Irradiation in high doses changes the color of the food being irradiated. Scientists must determine how low of dosage can be used and still kill the germs, save money, and preserve quality.

The research labs are working with high pressure combined with carbon dioxide to sanitize equipment.

Microbes in alfalfa sprouts is considered the number two food contamination outbreak in the U.S. It's difficult to kill microbes in alfalfa sprouts because the germs can hide in the crevices. If heated to kill the microbes, the seeds often die instead of sprout. Pressurizing the sprouts can break down the tension and kill the germs hiding in the crevices.

Although irradiation is an effective method for many items, scientists are searching for several methods since some consumers are skeptical of the process.

Dana McElroy explained how extension agents have been trained to teach food services and processors how to prepare and serve safe food. The university offers a food safety certification program.

The long process of researching new methods, proving them safe, and gaining FDA approval is expensive.

But it isn't only contamination that worries scientists, it's also plant diseases such as plum pox that threatens the orchard industry. To be effective in solving problems, researchers need to understand the problem. That is the struggle with the plum pox virus. Scientists do not understand exactly how the virus thrives. Poor understanding limits the ability to stop it.

Thanks and congratulations to Gary Stoltzfus, Elverson, Berks Co., PA, on the construction of the first white Slurrystore® in the northeastern U.S.!

On Being a Farm Wife

(and other hazards)

Joyce Bupp

"Collection Notice."

Now what, I wondered, scanning the top of a piece of mail just opened from the day's delivery.

"Action requested," continued the red-highlighted piece of paper, in slightly smaller letters than the collection notice headline. And in print so tiny to be almost unreadable: "Return this notice with your payment."

Huh? What is this?

The notice proceeded to politely inform me that we all make mistakes" and "I'm sure most of us want them cleared up as quickly as possible. That's why your name was referred to us by the publisher of a magazine."

By gosh, this piece of mail was correct. We do all make mistakes.

And this "collection notice" was a mistake on someone's part that was making me increasingly irritated the further I read it.

Yes, I had months ago received a single, sample copy of the magazine for which I was now being served a "collection notice." I had no recall of ever having sent for the sample issue and no idea of why it came in the first place.

Actually, it had proved to be a worthwhile and interesting publication, one that I had actually considered subscribing to, despite the fact that it seemed a little pricey. After taking inventory of the accumulation of publications then as yet unread and piling up on desks and tables, that idea was bagged. We have trouble keeping up with what already comes.

"Possibly you have forgotten to send your check," continued the piece of mail.

Possibly I didn't. And don't plan to. Because I never ordered the publication in the first place. I didn't order it in the second place. And I wouldn't order it now, probably, if they paid me to.

And now my account was being turned over for collection.

Since I don't have an account, and am not receiving this publication, how can that be? And, if this scam works, how can I get in on it?

No, no, just kidding.

What really bugged me about this piece of mail was the in-your-face attitude. I did not order the publication. I am not getting the publication. I do not have an account. Yet, a "collection notice."

"That almost sounds criminal," observed our daughter, scanning the piece of mail I handed her later that day.

How many people, receiving this aggressive, borderline-threatening piece of mail, would pay up?

You betcha'. Lots.

The three-sectioned "collection notice" measures nearly 14 inches long and almost six inches wide, accented with bright red highlighting. It looks nothing like a normal business billing — which presumably a genuine collection sort of notice could be expected to resemble. The style and design are almost identical to some of the four credit card applications which also came in the mail the same day.

You can imagine my relief in knowing that if I just mailed a check for $19.95 to this national credit auditing outfit, "further collection activity on our part can be avoided."

Well, goody. I will sleep better nights, just knowing that.

Except, that there won't be a check for $19.95 or its way to save them the trouble of generating additional "collection activity."

A "P.S." noted that upon receipt of my payment of my subscription would be reinstated. And a further notice indicated that unless I disputed the "validity of the debt," it was assumed to be valid.

Makes one wonder if these folks have ever gotten acquainted with the very valid Better Business Bureau or Consumer Protection agencies.

Perhaps, I can help with an introduction.

How Is Reduced-Fat Peanut Butter Made?

Regular peanut butters contain a minimum of 90 percent peanuts, whereas the reduced-fat varieties contain approximately 60 percent peanuts.

The peanuts that are taken out in reduce-fat products are replaced by corn syrup solids, which give "body" to the product. Unlike the peanuts that they are replacing, the corn syrup solids have no fat, thereby reducing the overall fat content of the peanut butter.

(The numbers of calories in reduced-fat peanut butters are not necessarily lower than the numbers of calories in regular versions of peanut butter, however.)

Soy protein, vitamins, and minerals are also added to reduced-fat peanut butters in order to make them nutritionally equivalent to regular peanut butter.

Children Need Independence

As parents we claim we want to raise our children to be independent and self-confident.

Unfortunately, a guaranteed guidebook of how to accomplish this feat has not been written so each parent needs to develop his/her own plan for completing the task.

Several books are available suggesting a variety of tools that parents can use. Parents In a Pressure Cooker: A Guide to Responsible and Loving Parent/ Child Relationships by Jane Bluestein and Lynn Collins includes a chapter on Independence and Problem-Solving. The authors suggest that parents often resist allowing children to make their decisions because it makes the parents feel as if they are not needed anymore.

Parents are still needed but their role will be different. Children need your acceptance. Parents need to encourage and support them as they begin to make decisions on their own.

Unfortunately, parents frequently use criticism as a way to motivate their children. An example of this behavior is telling your child that he or she will not succeed in school as a way to get homework finished. This strategy is generally ineffective as children internalize the message and believe they can't succeed so instead of working harder, they give up and quit trying.

It's better to allow your child to experience the consequences of their actions whether it is good or bad. In this example, if the child consistently neglects completing homework assignments, they may fail the class. As a parent we really want to intervene even if it means doing the homework for the child so the child will not experience this failure.

But dealing with the consequence of failure will become a more effective learning experience for the child than if we protect him from the consequences.

Sometimes children will approach you with a problem and you think you have to solve it for them. This may not be what your child really wants from you. Your child may just want you to listen while they talk themselves through the problem.

A poem "Could You Just Listen?" states "When I ask you to listen to me and you feel you have to do something to solve my problems, you have failed me, strange as that may seem."

Listening, without giving advice is difficult for us to do, after all, we have a lot of "life experiences" to draw from and we can quickly make an appropriate decision.

Occasionally parents need to get involved in the issue, but if we always jump in with help, we are not really helping. This method, like criticism, is not helpful to our children as they struggle to become independent.

Jane Bluestein in Parents Teens and Boundaries: How to Draw the Line, suggests that if your child has learned that acting helpless will result in someone taking control and solving the problem you can still help them learn to take responsibility. She says you need to refrain from jumping in and solving problems, instead gently and lovingly push the problem back to them to solve.

You might ask the child if there is something they want you to do but be careful not to handle the problem for the child.

Be sure to check back with your child, you might ask: "How do you feel about what happened?" "What can you do to avoid this problem in the future?"

When parents offer encouragement and support instead of solving the problem for their children, children gain confidence and will be able to make responsible decisions when adults aren't directly supervising.

John Rosemond in Teen-Proofing gives parents suggestions on how to manage teenagers so they will take the responsibility of control over their own lives. He suggests that the teen years are akin to revisiting the "toddler" stage of child development. Parents of young children are advised to "child-proof" their homes by removing things that might harm the child. When we are dealing with teens it's impossible to "teen-proof" their environment in the same way we did when they were young. As parents we need to guide them to manage their own self-protection by learning to make responsible decisions.

Jane Bluestein concludes the chapter on "Raising Independent Children" by saying "Problem-solving is choice-making." Your children will get better at it the more they do it. And the more they problem-solve successfully, the more confident they feel, and the more independent they become. Protecting children means giving them tools to protect themselves and plenty of opportunities to test these tools with you there to support them when the tool they select doesn't work.

Our children are finally old enough to be interested in their parents background. Judy, who was visiting from Georgia, asked her father a lot of questions and I think that he enjoyed telling her about his "growing up" days. He has always liked to tell about his years at Penn State.

She made so many notes on genealogy. It will take her days to put all the information on her computer. Some copies were also made of papers that I wrote on family history.

Her daughters are 10 and 12 and she and her oldest did a job for me that did not think they could do. As one rocking chair on my front porch was in bad shape, she said that she would recane it. And, she did. They bought caning and wove a beautiful new seat. Then they painted the chair and even repaired another one. She had never done such work before.

During the days that she was here, she found time to visit relatives. And, also met with a college roommate who lives in another county. She also took her husband to a business meeting in Baltimore.

One day we all ate at a restaurant, but most of the time we cooked big meals at home. They made two pies and I really enjoyed the shoo-fly pie. We roasted a chicken and baked ham and added lots of my frozen vegetables and canned fruits. Our children flatter me by saying that the frozen vegetables are better than the ones they buy in the store.

Too soon it was time to pack their belongings and drive back to Atlanta. However, they did see Luray Caverns in Virginia on the way home.

Peachy Fresh Fruit Recipes

This is the season to indulge in fresh fruit. Its great taste is incomparable to preserved fruits. Research shows that fruits can help to reduce cancer risk, coronary heart disease, and hypertension.

Fresh fruit is a great source of vitamins A and C. Cantaloupes have only 35 calories per cup. One medium peach has 40 calories and 2 grams fiber. Two cups watermelon has 90 calories and one gram fiber.

When buying peaches:

- Look for a creamy gold to yellow-undercolor. The red or blush is an indication of variety rather than ripeness.
- The crease should be well defined and run from the stem end to the point.
- A peach should smell peachy.
- Don't squeeze peaches; they bruise easily.
- Place firm peaches on the kitchen counter for a day or two and they'll ripen.
- Promptly refrigerate ripe peaches. Use within a week.
- To peel a peach, dip it into boiling water for 30 seconds, then in cold water. The peeling should slide off easily.
- To keep peaches from darkening after slicing, sprinkle with lemon juice or ascorbic acid.
- 1 pound fresh peaches equals 3 medium peaches or 2 cups sliced peaches or 1½ cups peach puree.

When selecting cantaloupes:

- Look for a rich golden color, thick nteeing, a delicate aroma and give a little at the blossom end.
- Cantaloupes can be refrigerated; however, let them warm to room temperature before serving to allow the fruit to soften and become juicier.

When selecting watermelon:

- Choose a watermelon symmentrical in shape without dents, bruises, and cuts.
- Thump if you must (listen for a dull, hollow sound.
- Turn watermelon over. The underside should be yellow with a healthy sheen to the rind.
- Lift the watermelon. It should be heavy for its size.

Kelly Miller, left, holds her prize-winning Blueberry-Raspberry Pie that took best of show in the baking contest sponsored by the Pennsylvania State Beekeepers. The Lebanon County family farm of American Honey Queen Renee Blatt, right, was the site of the state beekeepers' annual picnic.

Featured Recipe

Beekeepers from across the state gathered for the Pennsylvania State Beekeepers annual picnic on the farm.

This year's event was conducted on the Lebanon County farm of the American Honey Queen Renee Blatt. Educational and fun events included a honey baking contest. Judges selected this timely recipe prepared by Kelly Miller, Manheim beekeeper. For more information about the picnic, see the feature article in this section.

Blueberry-Raspberry Pie

2 cups blueberries
2 cups raspberries (remove seeds)
⅓ cup honey
⅓ cup sugar
1 cup water
Dash lemon juice
2 tablespoons cornstarch
3 tablespoons minute tapioca

Crust:

2 cups flour
1 teaspoon salt
¼ cu shortening
5 tablespoons cold water

Combine raspberry puree, water, lemon juice, sugar, honey, cornstarch, and tapioca. Cook just until thickened. Add blueberries. Pour into pie shell. Add crust topping or cut leaf-shapes out of pie dough to decorate pie. Bake at 350 degrees for 25 minutes.

FRESH PEACH ICE CREAM

1½ quarts mashed fresh peaches (peeled, soft)
2 tablespoons vanilla extract
1 teaspoon salt
2 14-ounce cans sweetened condensed milk
13-ounce can evaporated milk
½ cup sugar
½ gallon milk
Ice and rock salt

Mix together peaches, vanilla, salt, condensed milk, evaporated milk, sugar, and milk and pour into ice cream churn. Surround the churn with mixture of ice and rock salt. Take the easy way and plug in the churn or get exercise and start churning. When the churn stops turning, wipe off and open. Spoon ice cream into bowls and enjoy.

Dickey Farms, Inc.

PEACH COBBLER

8 cups sliced peaches
1 teaspoon vanilla flavoring
2 cups sugar
⅓ cup butter
3 tablespoons all-purpose flour
Pastry for double crust pie
½ teaspoon nutmeg
Vanilla ice cream

Combine peaches, flour and nutmeg in a dutch oven; set aside to allow syrup to form (approximately 15 minutes). Bring peach mixture to a boil; reduce heat to low, and simmer 10 minutes or until peaches are tender. Remove from heat and stir in vanilla and butter.

Roll half of pastry to ⅛-inch thickness; cut into a circle to fit a 2-quart baking dish. Spoon half of peach mixture into lightly buttered baking dish; top with pastry. Bake at 475 degrees for 12 minutes or until lightly browned. Spoon remaining peach mixture over baked pastry.

Roll remaining pastry to ⅛-inch thickness and cut into 1-inch strips; arrange in lattice design over peaches. Bake an additional 15-20 minutes or until browned. Allow to cool slightly before serving. Serve with vanilla ice cream. Serves 8.

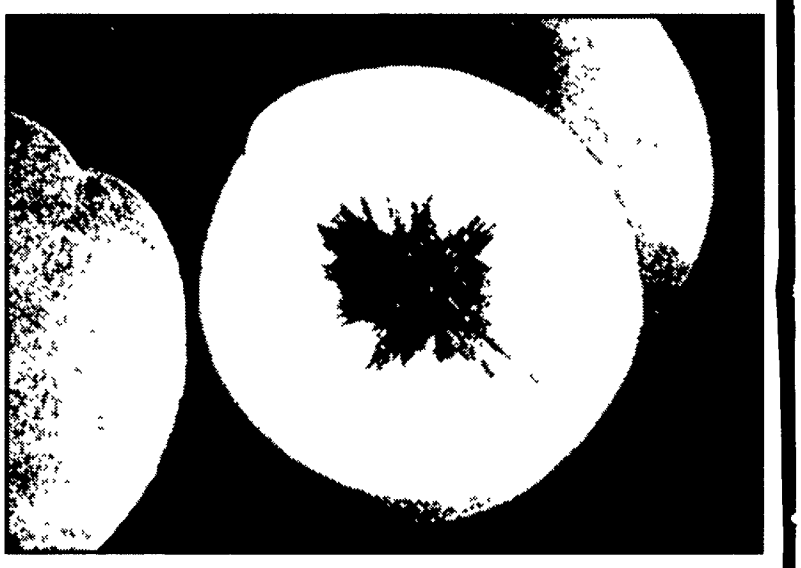
SUMMERY SWEET PEACH SAUCE

Puree 6 medium peeled and pitted peaches and combine with 1 tablespoon honey in a medium saucepan. Dissolve 1 tablespoon cornstarch in ¼ cup water and stir into puree. Bring peach mixture to a boil over medium heat and cook, stirring constantly, until the mixture thickens. Remove from heat and stir in ½ teaspoon lemon extract. Chill sauce and ladle over bread pudding, cake or ice cream.

INDIAN MELON SALAD

2 cups chopped cooked chicken or turkey
5 ounce can sliced water chestnuts, drained
8-ounces seedless green grapes
½ cup chopped celery
1 cup mayonnaise
½ teaspoon curry powder
1 tablespoon lemon juice
¼ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon freshly ground pepper
1 teaspoon soy sauce
1 cup honeydew melon balls
1 cup cantaloupe melon balls
Lettuce cups

Combine chicken, water chestnuts, grapes and celery in a bowl. Mix together mayonnaise, curry powder, lemon juice, salt, pepper, and soy sauce in small bowl, stirring to blend. Pour over chicken mixture, tossing to coat. Chill for several hours. Add honeydew and cantaloupe melon balls before serving. Spoon into individual lettuce cups.



A top quality peach should have a creamy gold to yellow undercolor, smell peachy, and taste flavorable.

Pennsylvania Beekeepers Gather For Picnic On The Farm

Many people watched intently as Tony Buzas, left, of Philadelphia tried to find the queen in one of Renee Blatt's hives.

Beekeepers like to get together to discuss problems and share successes in beekeeping. Jim Steinhaver, chief apiary inspector for the Department of Agriculture, answers beekeepers' questions about the many difficulties with keeping bees.

LEBANON (Lebanon Co.) — On Saturday, July 14, more than 90 beekeepers and their families and guests from 20 counties gathered in Lebanon County for the Pennsylvania State Beekeepers Association summer picnic.

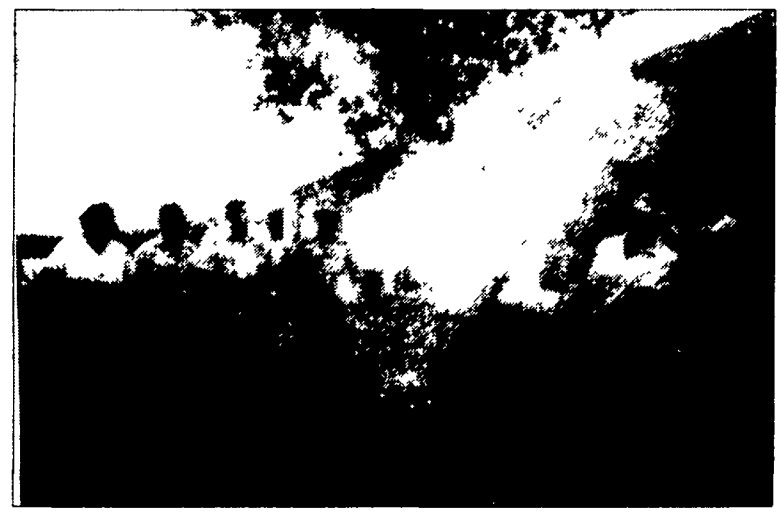
The picnic was held on the family farm of PSBA member and American Honey Queen Renee Blatt. Renee's parents, Steven and Jennifer, and her brothers, Andy and Joe, operate a 39-cow dairy and a 250-sow farrowing operation, and farm more than 300 acres.

The picnic got under way at 11 a.m. when Jim Steinhaver, chief apiary inspector for the Department of Agriculture, spoke about this year's inspection service and the most recent problem for beekeepers and honey bees, the Small Hive Beetle.

Kelly Miller of Manheim, spoke about her product line of hand cream and candles that she makes with beeswax.

After a pot luck lunch, the afternoon was full of activities. Many people entered items in the several classes for the honey baked goods contest.

Those items were judged and ribbons were awarded to the winners. A silent auction to raise money for the Pennsylvania Honey Queen fund was also a success, and lots of door prizes were available for everyone. Children enjoyed activities such as a candy scramble, face painting, blowing bubbles and other games. The beekeepers competed in their usual games of a smoker lighting contest where beekeepers try to light their smoker the fastest and then see who's smoker keeps burning the longest. During the frame nailing contest, beekeepers see who can hammer a frame together the quickest and most accurately.



One of the highlights of the picnic was the smoker lighting contest. Beekeepers compete to see how fast they can light their smoker and then to see who's smoker burns the longest. Seeing how much smoke they can make are Marsha Pearson, Montgomery County; Harold Jenkins, Montgomery County; Joe Duffy, Montgomery County; Ted Kaminski, Cambria County; Richard Patterson, Lancaster County; Tim Miller, Lancaster County (both behind smoke) and Lee Schleicher, Lehigh County.

Tony Buzas from Philadelphia put on a hive demonstration in Renee Blatt's bee yard where he took a couple hives apart to see if he could find the queen among 50,000 other bees in the hive. After more door prizes, and socializing, the honey baked goods were auctioned off and the picnic was over.

The Pennsylvania State Beekeepers Association will meet in November for their annual winter meeting in Lewisburg.

Any young woman who is between the ages of 17-21 who is interested in competing for the title of Pennsylvania Honey Queen at this meeting should contact Linda Hackenberg at (570) 568-2337.

For more information about beekeeping or the PSBA and its activities, contact Yvonne Crimbring at (570) 673-8201.

See the featured recipe on page B6 for the winning pie recipe and the best of show entry in the honey baked goods contest conducted during the picnic.

Animal Of The Day To Be Featured At Montgomery County Ag Fair

GAITHERSBURG, Md. — After 15 years of an animal of the year and 8 years of an indoor exhibit of the year, the Montgomery County (Maryland) Agriculture Fair has selected a general theme for 2001 which will enable all of the departments of the fair to be included. While the featured exhibits of the year were very successful, a new general theme lets everyone be a part of the whole — to have a "slice of the action."

Because animal exhibits are such a prominent part of the fair, an "animal of the day" will be featured this year. The selection of which animal for what day was based in part of what special activities have traditionally been held that day for that species. However, it is also hoped that animal departments will do something extra on their featured day. The schedule of animals is:

Saturday, Aug. 11 — Llama: Open llama show starting at 8 a.m. in the Cattle Show Pavilion. Sunday, Aug. 12 — Horse: Maryland Draft Horse and Mule Show in the Horse Arena starting at 8 a.m. Monday, Aug. 13 — Swine: 4-H Swine Breeding Show starting at 5 p.m. in the Swine Show Ring. Tuesday, Aug. 14 — Rabbit and Poultry: 4-H Rabbit Showmanship Competition in the Rabbit Barn. Wednesday, Aug. 15 — Sheep: 4-H sheep judging starting at 9 a.m. in the Sheep Show Ring. Thursday, Aug. 16 — Dairy: 4-H Dairy Show in the Cattle Pavilion starting at 2 p.m. Selection on supreme dairy champions in the Cattle Show Pavilion at 9 p.m. Friday, Aug. 17 — Dairy Goats: 4-H Dairy Goat Show in the Sheep Show Ring starting at 10 a.m. Nigerian Dwarf Sanctioned Goat Show in the Sheep Show Ring starting at 1 p.m. Saturday, Aug. 18 — Beef: Md. Angus Cattle Show in the Cattle Show Pavilion starting at 9 a.m. Texas Longhorn Show in the Cattle Show Pavilion starting at 2 p.m. Invitation chip throwing contest in the Cattle Show Pavilion at 1 p.m.

Well Preserved

Editor's Note: The Well Preserved news column is prepared by Lancaster County Cooperative Extension. It includes food preservation information and questions received in the office.

Alletta Schadler, former extension home economist in Lebanon County, offers these tips for managing your canning day.

Managing Your Canning Time

Getting organized for home canning has definite advantages. When you have all your equipment ready to go—and that includes new lids—and have needed ingredients on hand, your canning operation will be much easier.

But even more important is managing your time and the amount of foods you should can at any one time. It might seem that running your canning operation similar to a commercial processor, a speedy streamlined operation, would be the most efficient method. But you can over estimate how much you can process on any one day.

No matter how much food you have to process, only wash and prepare the amount you can get into one canner load at a time. It won't pay in the long run to have great amounts of foods washed, cut, being heated, waiting to be canned. To retain the most nutrients, foods should be processed as quickly as possible. Unnecessary or prolonged heating also causes nutrient loss and may affect the texture of the food, such as increasing the separation of tomato juice.

When processing canned foods you have to count the length of processing plus the time you need to fill jars, wipe sealing edges, and apply lids. If using a boiling water bath canner, you also have to count the time needed for the water to return to a rolling boil. When using a pressure canner, exhaust and cooling time can add as much as an hour to the actual processing times. For example, when directions for canning whole kernel corn in quarts call for processing 85 minutes you can assume that one canner load will require a total time of 145 minutes or 2 hours and 25 minutes.

To insure the most efficient home canning operation have necessary equipment and supplies on hand, have countertops clean for more working space, plan other activities so as not to interfere with canning—including simple meals, know the capacity of your canner and how long the total heat process will take.

Just a reminder, if you are using a pressure canner, have your dial gauge checked annually. Lancaster County Cooperative Extension will be testing dial gauges from 9:00 to 1:00 p.m. on Wednesdays or by appointment through September 12 or contact your local cooperative extension office.

A home economist is available to answer your food preservation questions on Wednesdays from 9:00 a.m.- 1:00 p.m. Call (717) 394-6851 or write Penn State Cooperative Extension, Lancaster County, 1383 Arcadia Road. Room 1, Lancaster, PA 17601.

Consuming Thoughts

Fay Strickler

Penn State Extension Home Economist for Berks Co.

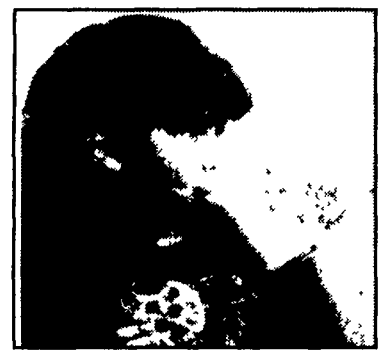
Many parents, grandparents and childcare providers are often frustrated by toddlers' and preschoolers' eating patterns at mealtime. Problem eaters will often refuse food or will only eat the same food, day after day. If you have experienced some of these problems, read on to find possible solutions.

• Child Has Small Appetite — The growth rate of toddlers slows at age one and so does the appetite. If your child doesn't eat much, you will need to see what she does eat is nutritious. Offer small sandwiches, fresh fruits, and vegetables or leftovers as snacks.

• Avoid allowing her to satisfy her appetite on low nutrient foods like candy, cake, chips or cookies. Try to offer food before she gets tired and cranky. Overly hungry children are sometimes too weak and upset to eat. Check with your doctor to see if there may be a medical reason for the limited appetite.

• Child Won't Try New Foods — Forcing a child to eat a particular food usually just creates a bad association with the food which can last for years. About all you can do is try various methods of preparation and offer it occasionally without reference to the fact that the child didn't like it before.

Infants and toddlers have more taste buds than adults do and they may truly not like some foods. Remember, too, that food temperatures make a difference. Foods that are too hot or too cold will not be well accepted.



• Child Demands the Same Food Over and Over — It is not uncommon for a preschooler to go on food jags and want the same food over and over. These periods usually do not last too long and are often an expression of independence. As long as the food in demand is not a high-sugar or other empty calorie food, allow the child his food choice and hope that the phase passes quickly.

• Child Won't Eat Vegetables — Vegetables have a bad reputation, especially with children. Creative preparation may help to make them more acceptable. Buy an inexpensive steamer basket and try steaming fresh vegetables over a small amount of boiling water. Cook for only a few minutes until tender, but still crisp and brightly colored. Combine several vegetables and steam together to add color and interest. Strong tasting vegetables like cabbage takes on a mild, sweet flavor when simmered just until tender in a small amount of milk.

Forcing a child to eat vegetables will often create unnecessary tension at mealtime. If cooked vegetables are rejected with dinner, try offering fresh vegetables with a dip as an afternoon snack. Children over three can handle most vegetables served raw. Try to stimulate an interest in vegetables by allowing your child to help select them at the market or grow them at home.

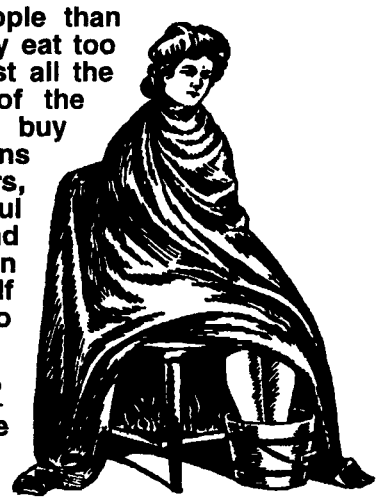
• Child Spills Often; Uses Fingers — This is normal behavior for young people. Coordination is not yet well developed so fingers work better than forks. Feeling food with the hands is one way toddlers can explore their environment.

When mealtime spills occur, handle them calmly and matter of factly. When you give too much attention to your child's bad behavior, she may begin to seek attention by intentionally spilling or misbehaving.

Be gentle and consistent with enforcing table manners and know that as the child matures, so will their eating habits. Remember to sit and eat with the child and set a good example.

Why Be Sick And Tired?

America has more sick people than most countries, because they eat too much cooked food which lost all the enzymes and up to 80% of the nutrition. Most food you buy contains harmful toxins because they use weed killers, insecticides and many harmful chemicals in growing it, and then more chemicals in processing to increase shelf life. But there is a solution to the problem.



Be Healthy And Energetic?

May doctors and people are now using a new and safer way to remove toxins and poisons from the body, clean out the arteries and develop a strong immune system so it can fight off diseases with amazing results, without any drugs. This program supplies the immune system with killer cells, memory and suppresser cells activity and training, which is like manpower and equipment to any army. It provides the immune system with all natural, organically grown fruit, grain and vegetables" which is like good food and ammunition to an army.

Over 40 million dollars were spent in research, and over 3000 sheets of scientific documented studies by doctors supports many positive clinical experiences, and backs up the patented process in providing proven products. The cost is considerable less than drugs, chelation, radiation, chemotherapy and operations. It does NOT interfere with medication. There are now viruses that can not be stopped with antibiotics, but these all natural products are producing excellent results with supervision from doctors.

Over 3000 Doctors Have Already Switched

They have switched from drugs to alternative medicine in order to help people recover from cancer, heart attacks, arthritis diabetes, lupus, fibromyalgia, allergies, fatigue and many other health problems without any side effects. We make no health claims. We work with doctors in giving the body all natural food grade products it needs to heal itself. There is also a Prevention Program to help you from getting sick. "An ounce of prevention costs far less, and is so much better than a pound of cure" (doctor and hospital bills). Which would you prefer, $149 a year to help prevent a heart attack, or a $50,000 by pass operation? The choice is yours. Let us try to help you prevent health problems.

Fifth Grade Art Project On Permanent Display

LINDA WILLIAMS
Bedford Co. Correspondent

BEDFORD (Bedford Co.) — Walk through the halls of Bedford Elementary and you might think you are in an art museum. Each year, students in grades K through five are involved in fantastic art projects under the direction of Lisa Miller.

While art is a highlight for all of the students, fifth graders are extremely enthusiastic. These students will participate in making an art project that will become a permanent fixture at the school.

During the first year of the new school's existence, Lisa led them in making large papier maiche' sculptures inspired by the Renaissance.

In 2000, they did large mural paintings inspired by the Impressionist painters and local artist, Kevin Kutz.

But 2001, may well be the "pie'ce de' resistance." Since the origin of the permanent projects, Lisa had thought about doing ceramic tile murals above the bathroom mirrors and elsewhere throughout the building.

Dr. Pat Crawford, Bedford school superintendent, gave her permission to write for an "Artist in Residence" matching grant through the Southern Alleghenies Museum of Art.

"This meant that the Pennsylvania Council for the Arts would provide half of the funding and the school district the other half. Upon receiving the grant, it was the Council for the Arts who suggested the expertise of Jim McDowell, a potter and ceramic artist from Johnstown. Lisa also took a three-day intensive workshop on creating tiles with the Moravian Pottery and Tile corks.

Professional artist McDowell told Lisa what materials she would need. Each of the fifth grades was responsible for one theme and through a democratic process arrived at: funny faces, under the sea, night time sky, wild designs and textures, butterflies and flowers and Pennsylvania birds. Some of the designs involve single tiles while others took the cooperation of several students to design a large bird or flower including several tiles.

Some classes totally designed the murals in advance, others, just parts of it, and one group was totally under Jim McDowell's direction.

All of the art students at Bedford Elementary had the opportunity to see a professional at the potter's wheel. Kindergarten through 4th grade made a small 1 by 3 inch tile.

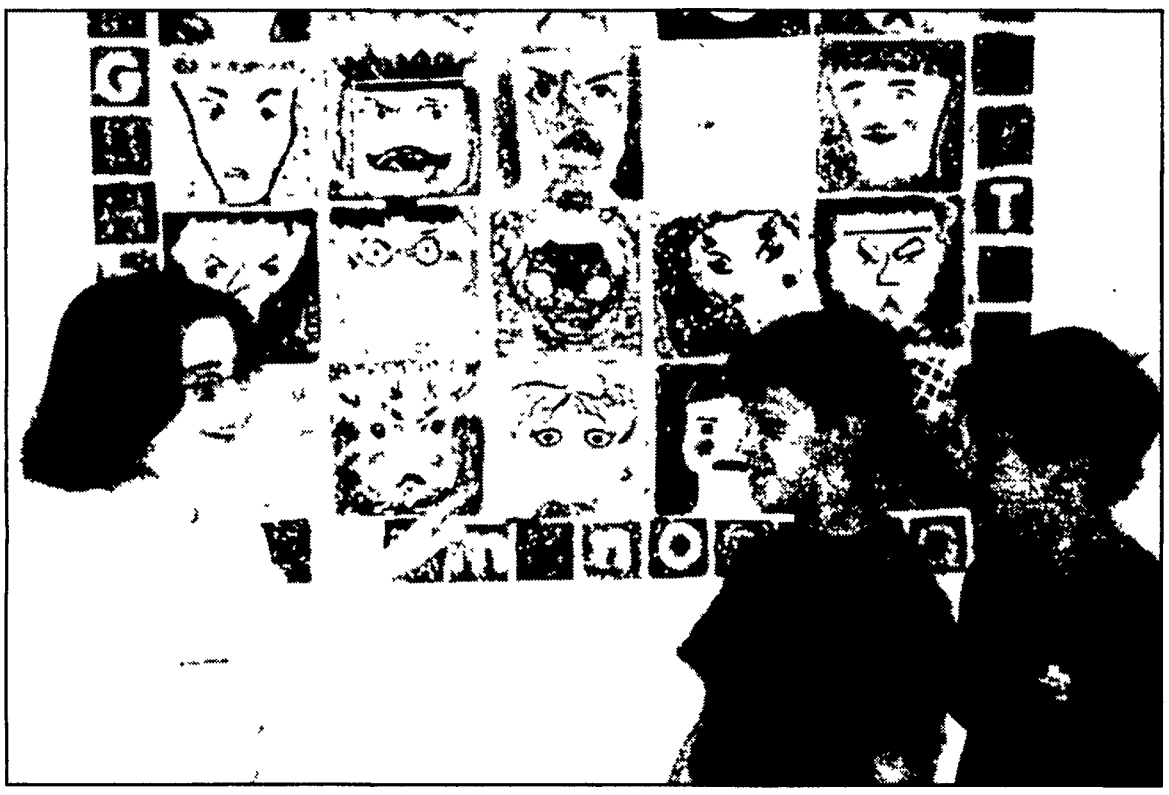
After observing Jim, the younger students made a potato head or ugly jug mug. Parents and grandparents were invited to participate and approximately 250 were on hand to try hands on creating from clay.

Lisa bisque fired all of the finished products. The children glazed them and Lisa returned them to the kiln for glazing. Kim McGee, a fifth grade teacher, was Lisa's right hand friend volunteering to help organize the project and glaze fire the tiles.

"But there was still the problem of how to get the finished fifth grade tiles on the wall to become permanent," Lisa says. "I called on the skills of one of our mentors, a retired ceramic tile contractor, Jay Williams. He donated both his times and skills in making Lisa's dream become a reality. "I learned a great deal about tile installation," Lisa admits.

All of the panels will now have to be hand grouted due to the unevenness of the tile surfaces. When totally finished, Lisa hopes it will be a project which will be visited by the students through their adult years and into their children's or even grandchildren's school years.

Lisa is a 1983 graduate of Bedford High School. She is the daughter of William and Charlotte Schaeffer of Friends Cove and is married to professional artist Brice Miller. They reside in Morrison's Cove.



Students admire their work on the face tiles.

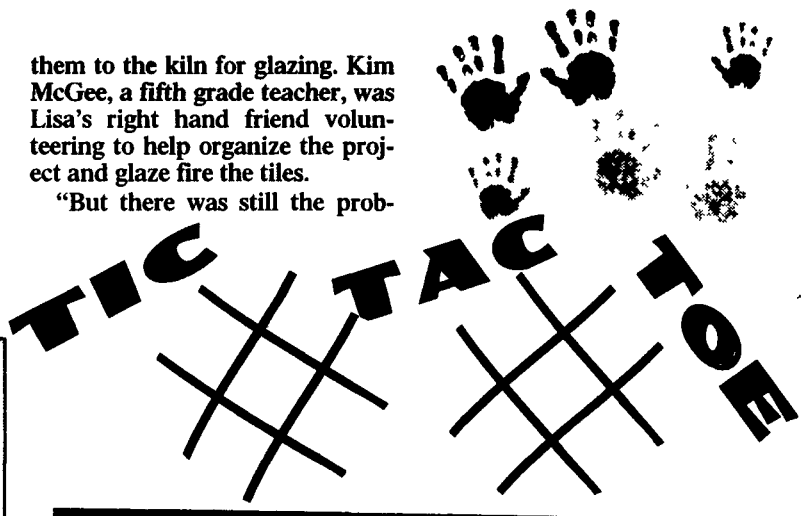
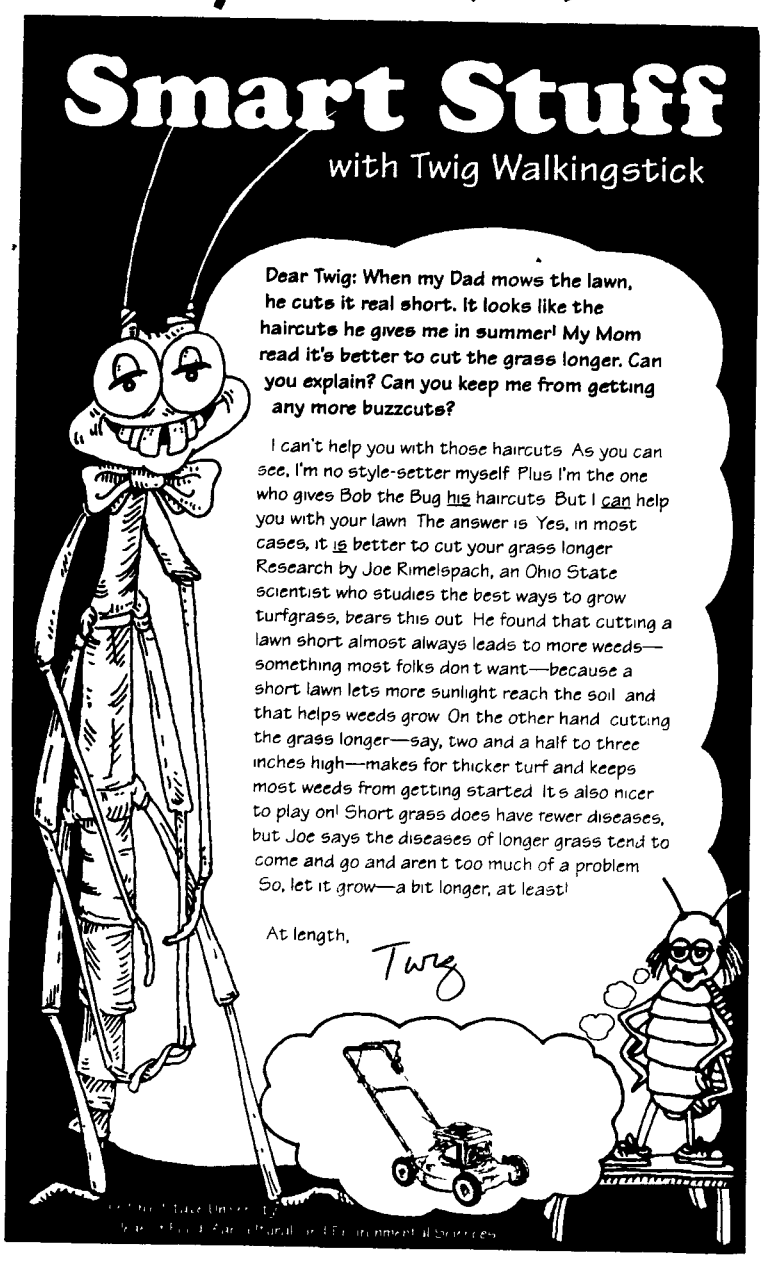
Proud of their work, these students point to the wild design and textrue pattern located above the restroom mirrors.





Smart Stuff
with Twig Walkingstick
Dear Twig: When my Dad mows the lawn, he cuts it real short. It looks like the haircuts he gives me in summer! My Mom read it's better to cut the grass longer. Can you explain? Can you keep me from getting any more buzzcuts?
I can't help you with those haircuts As you can see, I'm no style-setter myself Plus I'm the one who gives Bob the Bug his haircuts But I can help you with your lawn The answer is Yes, in most cases, it is better to cut your grass longer Research by Joe Rimelspach, an Ohio State scientist who studies the best ways to grow turfgrass, bears this out He found that cutting a lawn short almost always leads to more weeds—something most folks don t want—because a short lawn lets more sunlight reach the soil and that helps weeds grow On the other hand cutting the grass longer—say, two and a half to three inches high—makes for thicker turf and keeps most weeds from getting started It s also nicer to play on! Short grass does have fewer diseases, but Joe says the diseases of longer grass tend to come and go and aren t too much of a problem So, let it grow—a bit longer, at least!
At length,
Twig

Manor FFA Members Attend Cooperatives Institute

Recently, three members of the Manor FFA Chapter — Robert Garrett, Kristina Eshbach, and Daniel Harnish — attended the Pennsylvania Council of Cooperatives Institute at Shippensburg University, where they learned about types of businesses.

The PCC/PSU Summer Institute is an educational forum for Pennsylvania high school and college age youth. Summer Institute utilizes a workshop and idea exchange format to educate youth about the way cooperatives do business. Each year guest speakers present workshops on current high profile issues, such as biotechnology, genetic engineering, rural/urban interface and agricultural economics.

The program is sponsored by the Pennsylvania Council of Cooperatives and Penn State University's Cooperative Business Education Program. PCC and PSU also sponsor youth selected from Summer Institute to attend the National Institute of Cooperative Education.

At Summer Institute, they helped form, name and operate one of four mini-cooperatives to sell a product or service during the institute. Four group of teens were owners of the MINICO and had an active role in the success of the business.

Special guest speaker Secretary of Agriculture Sam Hayes discussed International Marketing in a workshop with the institute scholars.

Daniel Harnish and Kristina Eshbach were selected to attend the National Institute of Cooperative Education (NICE) which will be conducted in Atlanta, Ga. July 22-26.

Two FFA Members To Attend Coop Conference

The Pennsylvania Council of Cooperatives Summer Institute June 24-27 was a week-long conference of learning about cooperatives.

Two members of the Big Spring FFA, Bernie Nace and Mark Fulton, were selected to attend the National Institute of Cooperative Education Conference in Atlanta, Ga. from July 21-26.

At Shippensburg University Bernie and Mark participated in a week full of general sessions, team building activities, dances and lots of fun activities.

"PCC was amazing even the second time around. Meeting so many new people from all over the state and learning an abundance of information about cooperatives and having fun while doing it," Bernie stated.

Garman and 'Jo' Win World Championship

MICHELLE RANCK
Lancaster Farming Staff

EPHRATA (Lancaster Co.) — The one-week trip down South proved to be a good one.

A great one, in fact, as on July 3, in Forth Worth, Texas, Noel Garman, Ephrata, captured a World Championship title at the World Championship Paint Horse Show, a competition of the American Paint Horse Association (APHA).

Years of hard work paid off for Garman and "Colonel Dakota Jo," an 11-year old Quarter Horse gelding, as the pair turned in the best time to win the Novice Barrel Racing class.

Barrel racing is a timed event as the competitors run a complete a cloverleaf pattern around three barrels, "a right turn and two left turns," said Garman.

Approximately 2,000 entrants competed at the show, which attracts competitors from the U.S. Canada, Germany, and Australia. Classes include Western, English, cattle, driving, and speed classes.

"There are people from all over the country. I knew I was competitive at home but didn't know where I stood there. I knew we had to give everything we had," said Garman.

In barrel racing horse and rider either "blow wide" or "wrap" the barrels, and Jo's expert wrapping of all three barrels helped to win the title, according to Garman. The pair competed in seven classes in different levels of competition. They also took home a first in amateur pole bending, another pattern class where horses run weaving pattern around poles.

Growing up on a dairy farm in Mount Joy, Garman enjoyed the horses her family owned to entertain the family's bed and breakfast guests. "I rode as soon as I could," she said — although she was pressed into service with milking duties. "I just fell in love with horses and that was it, they (her family) had to make me get off," she said.

Her parents, Galen and Eileen Benner, supported her horse affinity, as her father would tack up the horse she would bring to him before she headed out on long trail rides around the 120-acre Rocky Acre Farm.

When she was nine year old she got into barrel racing with her 4-H club. Saturday mornings in the summertime would find her riding along with one of her four brothers to another show. "Then when I turned 16 they wondered which of their trucks I wanted," she said.

Noel's husband, Jason, accompanied her to Texas, along with both of their parents, her trainer, and the horse's former owner.

Noel received a saddle from a first-place finish in recent state competition. The ribbons are from the world championship title.

"I just did average, but I loved to ride. As long as I was with my horses, that was enough," she said. "It didn't really matter to me where I placed."

When Garman turned 17 she got in touch with a local lessons and got lessons to improve her competitiveness in the sport. With the addition of a competitive horse, she made it to 4-H states, her first big event in the class. She took several years off for college and married Jason Garman, who was also interested in horses and competes in reining classes.

"At that point we started pursuing a professional level of horses," she said. "We knew that someday we wanted to get a well-bred, well-trained horse."

Moving to the next level placed Garman at Evergreen Farm, Wrightsville, where she came under the tutelage of trainers Terry and Peg Helder. At Evergreen Farm she began taking lessons on Jo. The trainers quickly noticed a connection between horse and rider.

"It has to be a team between you and the horse. It's so competitive it takes a true connection between you and the horse," she said. "when I sit on him I just feel like I belong there."

More training and victories in the ring led Jo's owner to offer him for sale to Garman, who purchased the gelding in February.

Garman and Jo won a fourth at Colonial Nationals in Lexington, Virginia, out of 715 entries and are planning to return this year to the same event.

They also competed at the National Barrel Horse Association (NBHA) state show in Dillsburg in June. Their lowest time qualified them to take home the state championship in the open 1D class.

At Evergreen Farm Garman rides five of her own horses — three seasoned and two younger animals which she is training for future competition.

She hopes to continue to competing and is looking for bigger shows to go to. Jo, 11, will race another four years with Garman keeping the schedule light and saving him for the bigger competitions.

"He got tired but never quit on me. He ran with his heart toward the end."

ANSWER — L. Casteel wanted to know the value of 10- and 20-quart White Mountain ice cream freezers electrified with jacks and motors. In the past the freezers had been used to make homemade ice cream for festivals, but most of the workers have grown older and the work is too difficult for them to continue. Thanks to Verna Nolt, 575 New Holland Rd., New Holland, PA 17557, who writes that she doesn't know the value but is interested in buying the 10-quart freezer. She would like to know the price and condition before making the final decision.

ANSWER — M.L. Smyer, York, requested information on lightening bugs. She wrote a delightful antidote about when she was 17 years old and a boy tried to impress her by releasing three shoe boxes of lightening bugs in front of her. She said the display was beautiful and better than any firecracker display. Since then she has been trying to find out more about the bugs. Thanks to Catherine Goubeaux, Strasburg, who clipped an article from her local newspaper that had been written by Sonia Randall, Oregon. According to the printed information, the fireflies light is produced in one of the rear segments of its abdomen. Its ability to turn the light on and off is called flashing and is believed to be a means of communicating courtship.

Most females do not fly but perch on a grass or twig and flash a light at regular intervals. Soon a male will respond and alight beside her.

Several varieties of fireflies have varying lengths of time between flashes and different shades of lights but each species can identify its own kind. More than 130 different flashing patterns have been observed.

Ancient Romans called they flying stars. Light from a bottle full of fireflies were used to perform an emergency operation during the Spanish-American War. It has been observed that frogs that swallow a large number of fireflies will begin to glow themselves.

Fireflies kept in a jar too long will lose their glow and eventually die. Although young fireflies take up to a year to develop, the adult life is only a few days or weeks.

The firefly is considered a beetle although it has a soft-sided body. Young fireflies, called larvae, and the nonflying females are often called glowworms. Some larvae even glow inside an egg.

Fireflies are not the only living organism that can produce light called bioluminescence. Some deep sea creatures and fish can glow in the dark but they cannot turn their lights off and on.

Scientists have tried but not succeeded in duplicating this cold light that is different from the warm light produced electrically by a light bulb.

ANSWER — Susanna Fisher, Lewistown, sends another view of Jackie Hall's question about moss growing on rock. Susanna writes that several years ago she read an article by a gardener specializing in planter gardens. She wanted green algae or moss to grow on terra cotta, stone, concrete planters and any semi-porous surfaces to give them character so they would not be so stark and harsh. She painted a damp pot with plain yogurt. The green moss grows within weeks instead of months and years that nature normally requires. If you add an extra layer of yogurt every week or two, it speeds up the process. This method may be used while plants are growing inside. The moss will grow faster if the pot is dampened occasionally but don't use a harsh spray of water or it will wash off the yogurt. If you ever want to remove the green growth, use bleach.

Quilt Odyssey To Open Aug. 2 In Gettysburg

GETTYSBURG (Adams Co.) — Quilt Odyssey, an annual quilt show and symposium, will take place at the AllStar Sports Center located four miles south of the square in Gettysburg on Old Business Route 15 from Aug. 2-5.

Quilts from the annual contest which is sponsored by Quilter's Newsletter Magazine, Pfaff, Bernina, Husqvarna-Viking, Brother, P&B Textiles, EZ Quilting by Wright's and Roxanne Products will be on exhibit. These quilts come from all over the U.S. from Maine to California — even Hawaii. This year, the exhibit includes quilts from Canada, Japan, England and The Netherlands. In the same location will be an antique quilt exhibit featuring quilts from Franklin, York, and Adams counties, plus an exhibit of Tifaifai (Tahitian applique) quilts. The exhibits help to show how quilting has evolved as an art form. A large merchants mall with more than 85 merchants will offer the latest in fabric (including Civil War reproduction fabrics), quilting gadgets, frames, furniture, sewing machines, books, supplies and quilt-related gifts and merchandise. Exhibit and merchant mall hours are 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Thursday through Saturday, and 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Sunday.

Historical lectures will be offered, both as a "light lunch and lecture" and in the evenings. On Friday, Aug. 3, there will be a light lunch and extensive slide lecture at noon on the York County Documentation project given by Joan Hamme and Barbara Garrett. At 8 p.m., Jeana Kimball will lecture on pioneer women and their quilts at the Eisenhower Inn next to the Allstar. Saturday evening at 6:30, Jeana Kimball will lecture on 19th Century applique at the Eisenhower, and Anita Shackelford will lecture on "Dating Old Quilts" at the Allstar. Tickets must be prepurchased for "light lunch and lecture."

Phyllis Twigg, a certified AQS appraiser, will be on hand at the Eisenhower to offer her services. If you are interested in having your family heirloom appraised for insurance purposes — or simply out of curiosity — appointments can be made before the show by calling Quilt Odyssey at the number below.

Started because of her love of quilting and at the urging of family and friends, the founder of Quilt Odyssey, Melissa Molino, never dreamed it would get international attention from quilters around the world. "It is exciting to hear from quilters from the far reaches of the U.S. and around the world. Quilting brings people together," states Melissa. "And it's good for the soul."

For more information, call (717) 423-5148, Monday through Friday, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., e-mail Quilt Odyssey at dmolino@mail.cvn.net, or write to Quilt Odyssey at 15004 Burnt Mill Road, Shippensburg, PA 17527. Registration, contest, and accommodation information also can be found at Quilt Odyssey's Website: www.quiltodyssey.com.

The conference was planned by capital and southeast region 4-H agents. Darlene Resh, Adams County 4-H agent, attended the program and presented a recreation leadership workshop on Hose Play. The workshop utilized nylons to make balls, Frisbees, and other toys to use in leading and playing games with youth.

Erie County 4-H Fair Set For Aug. 10-12

The annual Erie County 4-H Fair will be Friday through Sunday, Aug. 10 through 12, at the Waterford Fairgrounds. The three-day event is conducted each year to recognize the achievements of Erie County's nearly 2,500 4-H members.

Project judging begins on Friday afternoon with such projects as clothing, foods and nutrition, woodworking, crafts, veterinary science, and more.

A carnival to benefit the Muscular Dystrophy Association is scheduled in the Show Arena. The carnival is open to all youth at the fair and also to the general public. It will be a traditional backyard-style carnival with games of chance. All tickets will be just a nickel each. Last year's carnival raised more than $900 for MDA.

A book drive to benefit Edison Elementary School, 4-H's adopt-a-school partner, will be conducted in conjunction with the carnival on Friday. Coordinated by Erie County's 4-H Teen Council, anyone donating a new or used children's book will receive 10 free carnival tickets.

The annual 4-H Super Clubs Competition, will be conducted on Friday afternoon at 3:30 p.m., prior to the Family Picnic.

On Saturday, Aug. 11, activities will start at 9 a.m. with the Dairy Roundup, followed by the Dog Roundup. Also, at 9 a.m., the Livestock Roundup starts the judging of market lambs, followed by the steer fitting and breeding cattle competition. Market steers will be judged beginning at 3 p.m. The Rabbit and Cavy Roundup will also take place Saturday.

The 4-H Fair activities will wind up on Sunday, Aug. 12, with the annual 4-H Horse Roundup, beginning at 9 a.m.

New Horse Barn For 4-H'ers At Schuylkill County Fair

The Schuylkill County Fair will be home away from home to 18 4-H horses during this year's Schuylkill County Fair, July 30 through Aug. 4. A 40 by 100 foot horse barn was constructed thanks in part to a $25,000 state fair fund grant. The fair also received a second $25,000 fair fund grant for the construction of new shower facilities and office space.

Additional improvements this year include new paving in the indoor midway, which will feature Doc Swan's Magic and Comedy Show, as well as 30 vendors.

According to Allan Cornman, miday chairman, "Our outdoor midway is just about sold out and only a few indoor midway spaces remain." "I think the great entertainment line up again this year had a lot to do with the popularity for local businesses to promote their goods and services at this fair," concluded Cornman.

And the Schuylkill County Fair does have a great entertainment line up including Paul Revere and the Raiders, the Buckinghams, Clay Davidson, and Trick Pony, as well as gospel favorites, The Hoppers, and local favorite, John Bressler. The fair boasts a beautiful amphitheater nestled in the foot of the Blue Mountains.

Admission is only $6 per person which includes major nightly entertainment shows at 7:15 p.m. and 9:15 p.m., week long shows including Doc Swan's Magic and Comedy Show, and Bwana Jim's Reptile Show, unlimited amusement rides, agricultural museum, hands on nature museum, parking and more.

For more information on the Schuylkill County Fair, log on to www.schuylkillfair.com or call (570) 754-3247 (fair).

Lancaster County 4-H Skillathon

Over 75 4-H'ers from all facets of livestock including the Lancaster County 4-H clubs involved with beef, dairy beef, goats, swine, and sheep gathered their knowledge and tested their skills at the 2001 4-H Skillathon conducted at the West Lampeter Fairgrounds on June 22.

There were nine stations that needed to be completed that tested their knowledge on a wide variety of information pertaining to all livestock species.

These stations included a general 4-H quiz, equipment ID, meat ID, feed ID, identification of parts of animals, market lamb judging, wool judging, and meat judging.

There was also a bio-security relay race where the team had to dress up in protective clothing, run through an obstacle course, wash their boots, and cross the finish line.

The event was organized and run by LeeAnn Tice, this year's summer assistant of the Lancaster County Extension office, along with Lori Little, Lancaster County 4-H animal science extension agent, and Chet Hughes, Lancaster County livestock extension agent.

The winners of this contest were "The 4-H'ers" which consisted of Sarah Henry, Cody Andrews, Mirian Henry, and Ryan Donough. The "Talkers" filled the second place slot. Their team consisted of Johanna Rohrer, Rebecca Graybill, Stephanie Kauffman, and Derek Hanna. Closely following them was the third place team, the "Clovers," whose members were Carolyn Kensinger, Jennie Ream, Kyle Ream, and John Good.

Lackawanna County 4-H'ers Attend Fashion Revue

Eleven Lackawanna County 4-H textile science members recently attended the multi-county 4-H fashion revue in Montrose. Three members from the Glenburn Sewing Club led by 4-H leaders, Hilda Lewis and Ann Northup, received recognition for their outstanding work.

Those members were Melissa Benson of Dalton, second place in the junior wearable year two division; Shannon McDonald of Waverly, alternate in the senior division; and Megan Callahan of Dalton, winner in the senior division.

As a winner of the senior category, Megan Callahan represented the region at the state fashion revue conducted on the main campus of Penn State University July 25. She competed against members from across the state for the top 10 places.

During the event, the 4-H members attended workshops and modeled their handmade garments for judging on appearance, fit, design, modeling ability and construction of the garment.

During the fair, there are two open contests for youth and adults. Friday evening immediately after the opening ceremonies at 5 p.m., bring your hula-hoop and see if you can "hula-hoop" for the longest time in your age category. Winners will receive ribbons. On Saturday at noon, test your skill at spitting watermelon seeds for accuracy. In previous years, the competition was for distance. Come try your luck!

John Miller collects whatever appeals to him. He examines a German-made 1930s Steinbeit camera that does not use film, but negative plates that slide into the camera and pulled out from the top. Pictured at left are a Kodak 620, a twin lens reflex, and a Spartus press flash. Each of these models show a unique feature that help show the progression of camera photography.

Cameras Snap Progression Of Photography

LOU ANN GOOD
Food And Family Features Editor

LITITZ (Lancaster Co.) — Progress for snapping sharp, clear pictures at an affordable price continues to advance. Disposable cameras under $10 do a remarkable job of capturing the moment. The amazing advances in digital photography is becoming more and more affordable, but those old cameras are far from obsolete at least in the minds of collectors.

"They don't make cameras like they used to," John Miller said of the quality of camera body features and intricate mechanism.

People collect for a variety of reasons. Some hobbyists collect only Kodak or those made by a specific manufacturer. Serious-minded investors collect only rare, unique cameras guaranteed to increase in value.

Miller said of his quest to garner a collection of old cameras, "It doesn't necessarily need to be valuable, but the shutter and the aperature must work."

Miller became fascinated with old cameras when his father-in-law gave him one that he had purchased second-hand in Japan at the end of World War II. Setting shutter and aperatures and exposure meters allowed a lot of leeway compared to today's automatic focus and Miller enjoyed playing around with it.

Miller picked up another find at a garage sale. Soon he was frequenting antique shops in search of others. He soon discovered that he needed some guidance to determine value.

Flea markets and garage sales often allow for better buys, but one must be careful of deception according to Miller.

"The problem is that many sellers don't know exactly what they have and often think an old camera is worth more than it is."

Miller strongly recommends that collectors invest in a reliable resource guide. Pocket guides are available and give an idea of price when browsing through antique stores, but Miller prefers a $100 resource guide, which pictures each model, provides a bit of history, and values cameras according to grades of good, very good, and parts.

"It's the best authority around," Miller said.

Condition not only depends on appearance but also on rarity. The guide lists price differences for both antique shops and private purchases.

"You really should know what you're doing when you collect higher priced models," Miller said. "Some models are worth thousands and some are worthless reproductions."

Reproductions are only made of more expensive models, especially those with wooden bodies. Miller said that the original cameras can only be confirmed by comparing model numbers with those listed in the resource guide.

Miller collects a variety of cameras that he identifies as "whatever appeals to me."

A 1930 Steinbeit camera was once used professionally. Instead of film, the German-made camera required a negative metal plate that was slid into the camera and removed from the top. Metal plates cost about $5 today.

A 1950 Mecury enabled a home developer to convert a 35mm film to a half frame that enabled a 36 exposure roll to be increased to 72. According to Miller, it was the only camera ever that had a round circle instead of a shutter.

"Until Kodak came out with the Brownie, the average person could not afford a camera. Before that most cameras needed to be mailed back to the manufacturer to have the film removed and developed.

Kodak revolutionized the camera industry. But they are also cheaper as collectibles since they were more affordable from the beginning and more exist. It's possible to accumulate a collection of Kodak cameras at a very reasonable price.

Hobbyists who collect cameras can join a collector's club. These clubs assist collectors with information and can be a source for locating particular models. The internet also provides information and purchasing possibilities.

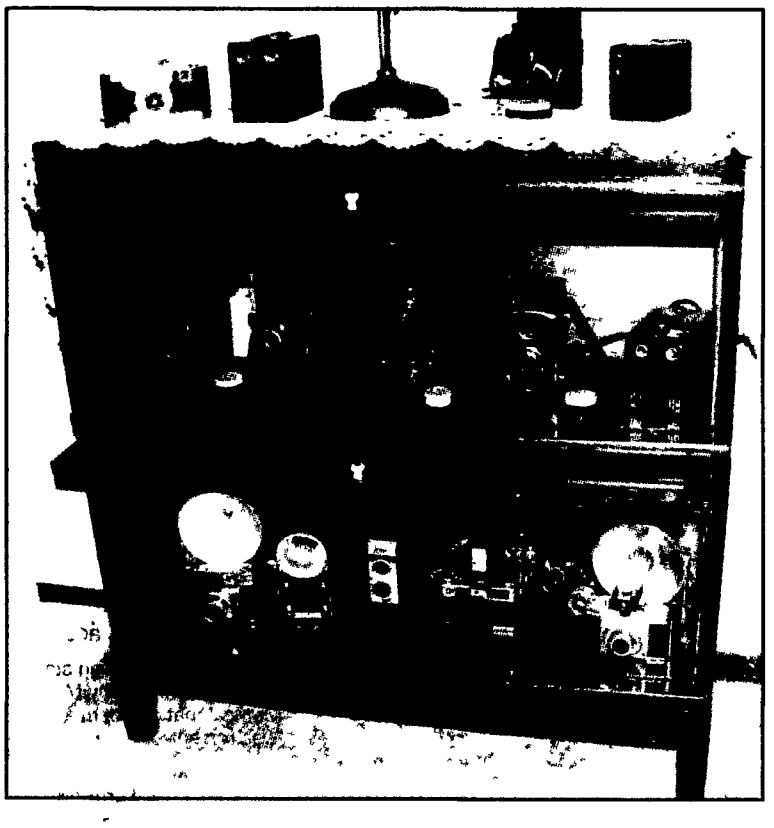
Some cameras come in leather cases, but these can actually cause their demise and ruin the camera, Miller said. He also warned against using glass cleaners to clean up old models. Cleaners are abrasive and tend to scratch or remove the finish.

Movie and Polaroid models are not highly prized by collectors unless they feature an extremely rare technique.

"If you find a camera in its original box, it increases in value. At a local farmer's market and flea market, Miller found a flash unit that was never out of the box that fit one of the cameras in his collection.

It's finds such as that and the thrill of the hunt that keeps Miller and other collectors searching for cameras wherever they go. Many collectors such as Miller set their sights on particular models that they read or hear about.

Miller has 15 cameras in his collection that he vows to never sell. He is seeking a press camera made in the 1940s similar to those seen in old movies.



Both hobbyists and investors find novel ways to display their collections and keep them protected. Miller finds these stacking barrister bookcases work well.

Antiques Questions And Answers

Can you date and evaluate this 12 piece service of china marked, "Royal Cauldon" "Victoria, England. Est.1774 " It has a crown and gold numbers. It was given to me by my mother-in-law who had it many years.The rims are in a multi-color floral pattern.

A.Z. - Bridgewater, NJ

From the description of the markings and the pattern your dinner service was probably made in the 1920s. In mint condition it could sell in a shop for $900.

What would be the worth of a bone china English castle cup and saucer that was made in Staffordshire, England and has a gold leaf design ?

D.M. - Southern, CT

Collectible Staffordshire pieces, 19th century, are earthenware, not bone china. Most likely your cup and saucer was made in the 20th century as a "collector's " piece by one of the many potteries in Staffordshire who were making bone china from the mid 19th century to the present. Similar sets can sell for $85 to over $125 in shops.

These four ceramic canisters with blue trim are marked "Germany" on the bottom. Each is marked as follows: tea; oatmeal; sugar and flour. Any value?

E.F.W. - Staten Island, NY

Ceramic dry food canister sets were popular from the late 19th century into the early 20th. They were made in Germany and Czechoslovakia as sets often containing eight or more containers. The more unusual the design the more expensive the set. A partial set with a plain design, such as yours could sell in a shop for $200.

Questions

I have a copy of the New York Herald, dated Saturday, April 15, 1865. It has a story about Jefferson Davis. It is fragile. How do I determine if I have something of value? It was sent to my great grandfather and was rolled up in a cardboard tube and in a closet.

K.K. - McCook, NE
(collectors Journal)

Old newspapers are valued not by age but by historical interest. Your paper is of historical interest, so much so that it has been reproduced. If you can have an expert authenticate it the value could be over $900. Contact Rick Brown, % Newspaper Collector's Society of America. Phone (517)-887-1255 on how to proceed.

Is there any value to this folding rocking chair with upholstered back and seat? On the underside it is labeled " Made by Albert M. Lock & Sons, Inc. Boston 14, MA, Article approved. D.C. 7-3-26.

J.F. - Harwick
(Valley News)

From the 1870s on patent furniture became a popular novelty. Your rocker lists the patent date as 1926. It could sell in a shop for over $250.

I found this buffet with attached mirror and claw feet at a garage sale. I removed several coats of paint and refinished it myself. What is the age and value?

M.N. - Lower Burrell
(valley News)

Keep going to those garage sales. Your turn-of-the-century oak buffet could sell in a shop for $700 or more.

Elegant Silver Pieces Designed For Bedrooms Only

French mistresses may have been among the earliest to enjoy silver items in their boudoirs. However, by the turn-of-the-century wealthy women everywhere displayed silver made especially for bedroom use. So did the fashionable men of their day.

When silver table and easel mirrors by a known maker come to the market they're costly. An easel back mirror attributed to 20th century, English silversmith William Comyns can sell at auction for more than $2,000. They were often part of a set that included candlesticks or vases. In America, Tiffany and others made quality mirrors with various sterling silver motifs.

Dressing table sets, known as toilet service, in the 18th century could include as many as 30 pieces. Brushes, combs, a glove tray, and mirrors were among them.

Hand mirrors weren't usually included until the late 19th century. These days just finding a single piece can be expensive.

Toilet bowls (actually small glass boxes) made in a variety of shapes, were an important part of a ladies service since they hald beauty items such as powders, salves, and pastes. By the 1880s they were made of cut glass with fancy silver tops...often in Art Nouveau designs. Less expensive were those of pressed glass with a silver-plated lid.

Combs could either be ornamental or utilitarian. By 1900 they were even designed for pockets with their own engraved silver cases.

Curling irons for men and women, made in the early 20th century, had beautifully designed handles. Those for men were small and used to curl a moustache or beard.

CLUES: Some unlikely silver collectibles could include toothbrushes, razors and razor cases and toothpicks. The toothbrushes made from 1750 to the mid-19th century consisted of a silver frame that had interchangeable ivories set with bristles. Silver toothpicks were popular into the early 20th century.

Wealthy traveling men of the 19th and early 20th century had dressing sets in finely appointed wood cases. Usually of silver-mounted mahogany. They contained silver or silver-gilt mounted cut glass bottles along with toothbrushes, shaving kit, and pot for soap.

These days mismatching is acceptable for collectors. Many specialize in one or two items like cosmetic pots, hand mirrors or brushes and combs. It doesn't matter if the brushes lack bristles or the comb has missing teeth. The silver design and age of the piece is what counts.

The Art Nouveau period offers many collecting possibilities.

Recognize the pieces with their motifs of women's heads with long hair, elongated twisted flowers and leaves, usually in repousse' (raised design). Hat pin holders and soapboxes are two possibilies that were made in quantities. They were found on the dressing tables of fashionable ladies in the late 19th century.

Long out of fashion are button hooks. However, they were essential from the 19th to early 20th century to unbutton shoes and gloves. Those in silver often had decorative handles with steel shafts. Some folded like a penknife.

Keep your eye out for the small pieces, often overlooked at estate sales. Not everyone appreciates a toothless comb.

Producers Approve Dairy Confidence Plan

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — National, state, and regional dairy promotion checkoff organizations, such as the Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program (PDPP) and the American Dairy Association and Dairy Council (ADADC) Mid East, have developed a plan to maintain consumer confidence in dairy products in the face of widespread publicity and misconceptions about animal health issues.

Producer leaders on national dairy checkoff boards have authorized Dairy Management Inc.™ (DMI) to initiate a dairy confidence plan that significantly enhances existing dairy image programs to address consumer concerns about animal health issues. The main goal of the dairy confidence program is to assure consumers they can continue to feel confident that the U.S. dairy production, marketing, and regulatory systems supply products that are among the safest in the world.

Lancaster County Man To Head Pa. Geologic Survey

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Pennsylvania Geologic Survey Department of Conservation and Natural Resources (DCNR) Secretary John C. Oliver announced the appointment of Jay B. Parrish, 46, East Petersburg, as director of DCNR's Bureau of Topographic and Geologic Survey.

"Dr. Parrish comes to DCNR with outstanding credentials and an impressive background in geology and its related sciences," Oliver said. "Clearly his leadership skills and depth of knowledge of geophysical research and technology will be an asset to the department in this key role."

The Bureau of Topographic and Geological Survey, also known as the Pennsylvania Geologic Survey, specializes in studying and analyzing the geologic heritage of Pennsylvania.

Parrish was director of the Lancaster County GIS (Geographic Information Systems) office. He previously worked for R. E. Wright Associates in Middletown.

Parrish earned a bachelor's degree from Millersville University, and earned both a master's degree and a doctorate in geophysics from Penn State University.

He previously served as an assistant professor at Bowling Green State University, Ohio; an explorationist for Mobil Oil; research scientist at the Caltech/NASA Jet Propulsion Laboratory; and has written for numerous trade publications and academic abstracts.

Ag Group Tells Congress New Policy Tools Are Needed

WASHINGTON, D.C. — "In this new farm economy, the old tools we've used to try and shore up and protect farm income simply aren't enough to do the job. We need a bigger toolbox and some new tools," Wayne Nelson, president of Communicating for Agriculture and the Self-Employed (CA) and a South Dakota grain farmer, said in testimony before a U.S. House of Representatives Subcommittee.

"These new tools include legislation that would encourage value-added agriculture development as a vital part of long-term strategies for farmers in a rapidly changing food and agricultural system," Nelson emphasized at a hearing on "Regrowing Rural America Through Value-Added Agriculture" by the House Small Business Subcommittee on Rural Enterprises, Agriculture and Technology.

Specifically, Nelson said CA supports H.R. 1094, the "Farmers Value-Added Agricultural Investment Tax Credit Act" that would allow producers to receive a 50 percent tax credit on investments in producer-owned, value-added enterprises up to $30,000 per year, and H.R. 1093 that would establish innovation centers to provide technical assistance, market and business development services for new value-added ventures.

"It is now abundantly clear that vertical integration in agriculture is here to stay," said Nelson, citing reports that only 17 percent of hogs are sold on the open market today compared to 43 percent in 1997. "This is a cause of great worry among farmers, but the results of this trend are by no means necessarily bad. Vertical integration can have many benefits — the only question is, will farmers truly participate and will they share in its rewards?"

He told the members of the Subcommittee that vertical integration from the farmer's field to the grocery shelf could offer the opportunity to better line up supply with demand. It also offers the opportunity to produce more specialized, tailored products that consumers want, whether it's lean pork, organic vegetables, branded beef products or specialty grains.

Nelson said another important new tool is Congressional support for stronger oversight to preserve competition in the agribusiness and food industries, and commended the Subcommittee Chairman, Congressman John R. Thune (R-SD), for introducing H.R. 1526, the Agriculture Competition Enhancement Act. Thune's legislation would put limits on mergers to prevent excessive concentration and provide for stronger oversight in the Department of Justice.

"The approach that is needed is to use new policy tools to see that farmer can participate in, are served fairly by, and will benefit from vertical integration, rather than being taken advantage of," Nelson said.

The CA leader also expressed support for USDA's cooperative stock purchase loan guarantee program, and urged the legislators to consider establishing a low interest loan program to help beginning farmers to participate in new value-added co-ops.

Nelson also reiterated his organization's support for legislation that provides an economic safety net for the farming community by continuing reliable farm income support programs and strong conservation incentives in the new Farm Bill Congress is about to write.

And, Nelson urged members of the Subcommittee to support:

• Help for beginning farmers and ranchers by exempting state "Aggie Bond" finance programs" from state bond caps, and legislation that would allow the Farm Service Agency beginning farmer loan guarantees to be used on Aggie Bond loans.

• The Ag Tax Package, H.R. 2347, that includes a range of tax changes that benefit agriculture, including:

— FFARRM accounts, which provide tax-deferred saving accounts to enable farmers and ranchers to save in good years for use in bad years.

— Needed clarification of IRS rules regarding taxation of income from CRP payments and certain farm rental payments.

— Other provisions that would benefit cooperatives and beginning farmers.

Farm Service Agency Explains Loan Deficiency Benefits

POTTSVILLE (Schuylkill Co.) — Grain prices are still below the established loan rates. The loan rates for 2001 crops are: barley $1.44, oats $1.30, wheat $2.63, corn $2.13, and soybeans $5.43. Whenever the daily market price is below the above rates a deficiency payment is available.

In all cases the benefit must be requested while you still have control of the grain. If you are selling grain directly from the field you must request payment prior to harvest. The benefit amount will be based on the date of sale. If placing grain in farm storage, you can select the day you wish to take the benefit anytime prior to sale or feeding.

If you wish to take a loan you will receive the full loan rate to use to pay bills. At any time prior to feeding or sale you can repay the loan at the daily market price or principle plus interest, whichever is less. For example: if you loan $213 for corn and the market price is $1.90 on the day you repay you pay $1.90 per Bu. There is no interest charge in his case. The difference, $.23 is considered a market gain.

In 2001, USDA has not received authorization to make these benefits available on farms not enrolled in the seven-year Production Flexibility Program. This applies to all program crops: however, soybeans are eligible for benefits on all acres reported to the FSA office.

For questions contact the FSA office at 570-622-1555.

Ohio State Honors Dairy Industry Leaders

PLAIN CITY, Ohio, — The Ohio State University, Columbus, Ohio, recently inducted Ron Long, vice president sire procurement, Select Sires Inc., into its Dairy Science Hall of Service. Each year at its recognition banquet The Ohio State University Buckeye Dairy Club presents this award to an individual whose initiative, guidance and sharing of knowledge have made him a pioneer in the dairy industry.

Long has been a dairy industry leader at the state, national and international levels for more than 40 years. While much of his legacy is seen in the improved type and production of dairy cattle, he also has served the industry well through his service and mentoring of others.

Dairy producers throughout the world have benefited from Select Mating Service (SMS), a cattle-mating program pioneered by Long that has grown to include more than 50 professionals who make more than 2 million matings annually. In addition, Long has served as president of National Dairy Shrine, as well as a member of the National Association of Animal Breeders (NAAB) Standardization of Type Traits Committee, Holstein Friesian Association (HFA) Type Advisory Committee, HFA Genetic Index Committee and Ohio State's Dairy Science Advisory Committee. He is also a well-regarded national and international judge.

After earning a bachelor's degree from Ohio State, Long returned to Longway Holsteins as a partner to manage the 70-cow herd. He then became an official HFA classifier. Following that, he was herd manager of the 600-cow herd at SanMarGale Farm. In 1973, Ron became vice president of dairy sire procurement for Select Sires, beginning a long tenure at what now is the leading A.I. organization in North America.

In 1998, Ron became chairman of the dairy sire department at Select Sires. Through his leadership, Select Sires consistently has developed what is arguably the industry's leading dairy-sire offering in all breeds. These bulls have also become chosen sire fathers for future generations, influencing all active-A.I. lineups.

Based in Plain City, Ohio, Select Sires Inc. is a federation of 10 farmer-owned and controlled cooperatives. It provides highly fertile semen as well as excellence in service and programs to achieve its basic objective of supplying livestock breeders with America's best genetics at a reasonable price.

Dr. Jim Kinder, left, chairman of Ohio State's Animal Science Department, presents Ron Long, Select Sires vice president of procurement, with the 2001 Dairy Science Hall of Service Award.

GEORGETOWN, Del. — More than 500 poultry industry personnel from across the country and around the world are expected to attend the National Meeting on Poultry Health and Processing in Ocean City, Md., October 17 - 19.

Delmarva Poultry Industry, Inc. (DPI), the trade association working for the continued progress of the Delmarva Peninsula's broiler chicken industry, sponsors this highly respected meeting.

"The meeting, now in its 36th year, is unique in that it brings together poultry health, live production, processing food safety, allied industry, and academic personnel to hear presentations that provide practical information to the poultry industry," commented meeting chairman Dr. G. Donald Ritter, the chairman of DPI's Poultry Health Committee. That committee, plus DPI's Processing and Food Safety Committee, selected speakers from 10 states, the District of Columbia, and two foreign nations.

In the combined session to open the educational portion of the meeting on October 18, speakers will discuss various topics related to food safety, consumer acceptance of irradiated chicken, and U.S. animal health programs.

Poultry health sessions include presentations on IBDV, a novel pathogenic reovirus strain in Europe, field observations from a Southeast U.S. reovirus infection, new approaches to control LT, supplying the live bird markets, low pathogen A1 control in northeast live bird markets, disease-control decision making, performance impacts from management practices, regional perspectives on broiler health, and five presentations on the importance of proper hatchery procedures.

In the Processing Session on October 18, topics include practical approaches to Listeria-proof packaging areas, edible coatings to protect food from pathogens, accurate detection of bone fragments, improving deboning quality, water reuse in processing, and preparing for USDA's moisture retention rule.

AMS Selects Plant Variety Protection Office Commissioner

WASHINGTON, D.C. - The USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service recently announced the selection of Paul Zankowski as the new commissioner of the Plant Variety Protection Office.

Zankowski comes to AMS from a position with the Harris Moran Vegetable Seed Company in Modesto, Calif., where he held the title of director of biotechnology. While with Harris Moran, Zankowski developed commercial biotechnology products, administered the molecular biology program, and conducted extensive plant breeding research.

As commissioner, Zankowski will head the USDA staff that administers the provisions of the Plant Variety Protection Act. The act extends intellectual property right protection to developers of new varieties of seed-reproduced and tuber-propagated plants. This protection encourages development of new varieties of plants, benefiting agriculture, home gardeners, and consumers.

Zankowski received his M.S. and Ph.D in plant physiology from the University of California and a B.S. in biology from the Pennsylvania State University.

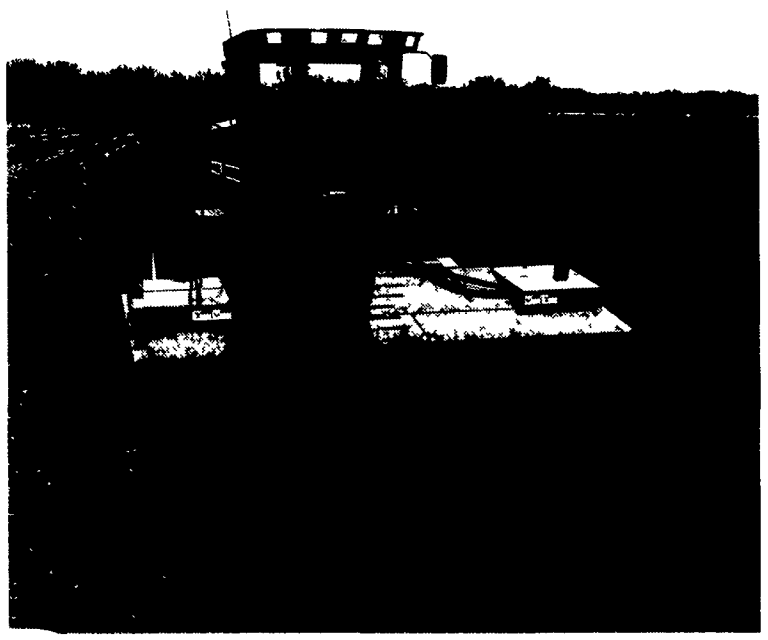
Hesston Improves Windrowers For 2001



Improvements for Hesston Self-Propelled and Pull-Type Windrowers extend through much of the line for 2001, including the new 8550S SP Disc Windrower (shown), with more horsepower for harvesting heavy, tangled crops.

ATLANTA, Ga. — "Not only is Hesston an established leader in the hay and forage industry," said Eric Raby, Hesston general marketing manager, "we also listen to our customers. As a result, cutting edge technology and ongoing product improvements are a Hesston hallmark."

"Productive improvements for Hesston Self-Propelled and Pull-Type Windrowers extend through much of the line for 2001," said Raby, "And it starts with more horsepower on the Model 8550 self-propelled disc windrower."

"The 8550 will now carry the designation 8550S, and will offer 165 engine horsepower in comparison to the previous rating of 152 horsepower," explained Raby. "This will give producers the extra power they occasionally need when harvesting heavy, tangled crops, or when cutting thick hay at higher elevations."

Prospective customers looking at the Model 8250 self-propelled windrower will now have one more option. In addition to the standard 8250 and 8250S models, Hesston will offer an 8250S equipped with a two-speed hydrostatic transmission, much like the one installed as standard equipment on the Model 8450. As part of the two-speed package, the new 8250S offering will also include a speedometer and a rotary air intake.

"We're also offering a new conditioner roll option on selected mower-conditioner and windrower headers," Raby adds. "As an alternative to the rubber on steel or steel on steel conditioner rolls that have long been a Hesston exclusive, we now offer TiCor™ conditioner rolls, which are shallow-lugged, intermeshing rubber rolls made from cord reinforced rubber that are stacked, compressed and machined into rolls."

As Jeff Noll, Agco sales engineer for Hesston products, explains, stacking and compressing the rubber on the roll has several distinct advantages to a roll which has the rubber molded to a steel roll.

"One benefit is that the TiCor rubber rolls absorb shocks from rocks or other foreign objects with less damage," he says. "Also, since the rolls are shallow-lugged, they do less damage to crop leaves than competitive deep-lugged rubber or urethane rolls." Finally, because the rubber is not molded to a steel roll, there are no problems associated with chunks of rubber gouging out or peeling away.

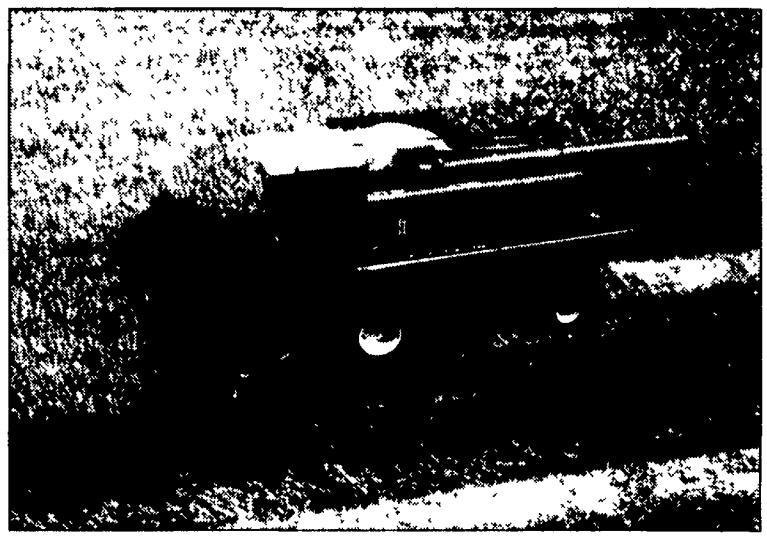
Case IH Celebrates 25 Years Of Axial-Flow Harvest Innovation

RACINE, Wis. — The changes in agriculture during the past 25 years have been nothing short of revolutionary. Global positioning systems, tractors with rubber tracks instead of tires, crops resistant to herbicides and pests, and many other new technologies have found a place in the farmer's toolbox.

Looking back a quarter century showcases another agricultural milestone. The year 1977 marked the birth of the Case IH Axial-Flow line, and the first 300 combines rolled off the assembly line that year. The Axial-Flow combine's innovative, but simple technology was a clear breakthrough in grain harvesting. In fact, the five principles built in the first Case IH rotary combine simplicity and reliability, grain quality, grain savings, matched capacity and crop adaptability — continue today, 25 years later.



The birth of the Case IH Axial-Flow combine in 1977 played a significant role in the sweeping changes that have come to agriculture in the last 25 years. The innovative but simple technology of the Axial-Flow combine provided a clear breakthrough in grain harvesting, and more than 100,000 have been sold over the years.

More than 100,000 Axial-Flow combines have been sold over the years and they've harvested upward of 1 billion acres of crops. Little wonder the Case IH Axial-Flow combine is legendary among grain farmers.

Its high reputation can be attributed in large part to a network of good dealers; loyal, enlightened customers; and, of course, solid engineering.

Dealer Since 1941

Charlie Hoober has seen it all in his years in the farm equipment business in Pennsylvania and Delaware. Hoober Inc. has been an IH and now Case IH dealer since 1941.

What does Charlie Hoober remember about the first Axial-Flow line?

"We really liked the clean, simple design, less grain damage and the combine had a lot of threshing capacity." He adds: "Without a question, we could see these combines had great potential."

Over the years, he estimates the dealership has sold 800 Axial-Flow combines. Today, Hoober is servicing 197 of the original 1400 Series units still being used by farmers.

What was the most significant change in the combine over the years?

"The best change was the specialty rotor because it handles wet crops," he says. "That really opened a lot of doors for us. The Field Tracker option and adding more horsepower along the way have been good, too."

Jerry Heim has owned and operated Hoxie Implement in Hoxie, Kan., since 1962. His first thoughts about the pioneering Axial-Flow combine?

"It was a revolutionary new design and we were really excited about it," he recalls. "The superior grain quality, simplicity and a new, modern look really made it stand out."

Hoxie Implement serves customers within a 100-mile radius of Hoxie in northwestern Kansas. The Case IH dealer also has a location at Colby, Kan. Wheat, corn, soybeans, milo and a few sunflowers are grown in the dealership's trade area.

"We tested a 1440 the year before production started," says Heim. "We knew right away it would be a big advancement in combines."

The basic design hasn't changed much since 1977, but Heim has seen other improvements. "More horsepower, nicer cabs, easier controls, and a much-improved cleaning system have all helped us continue to sell customers on the Axial-Flow combine's advantages," he adds.

Custom Harvester

Rick Farris, a custom harvester from Edson, Kan., bought a fleet of model 1680 combines in 1988.

"We started because of the good support people in the field," he says. "When you're harvesting thousands of acres over a large geographic area, you really need that service and parts support out there."

Farris harvests between 25,000 to 30,000 acres a year, getting the job done with four 2388 combines. Axial-Flow combines handle all of the crops his customers want him to harvest, including wheat, edible beans, corn, soybeans, malt barley and sunflowers. "There are a lot of things you can do with these combines to get the sample you want," he says.

"Reliability is a big factor, too. Case IH has a simple machine, and that's really good."

Design and testing on this new harvesting concept began further back than most people realize.

Camiel Beert has worked on the Axial-Flow combine since the beginning, first in engineering, then in manufacturing as a field representative. He recalls that IH personnel tested an early rotary combine concept in Mexico in 1958.

Engineers started work on the rotary concept in earnest in the early 1960s at International Harvester's combine works in East Moline, Ill.

"We used high-speed, 16-millimeter film to study how grain was handled by the rotor," Beert says. "We often shot 10 or 12 rolls of film a day and had it developed at a local TV station at night with the news footage. Then we'd study the films the next day to see what worked best."

Asked about his favorite memories of working with the combine and its customers, Beert replies: "A farmer told me once, 'I'd rather be in this combine than sitting in my living room.'"

The engineers who invented the Axial-Flow combine truly were focused on finding a better harvesting solution.

"With the rotor, we saw a clear breakthrough in grain quality," says Dave Gustafson, a test engineer for the Axial-Flow combines. "I started working at the East Moline plant in 1969. By then, we recognized the grain quality advantages of the rotary design. With the simplicity of the rotor replacing the normal cylinder, concaves, straw walkers and all the other parts, we realized we had something special.

"We had a lab called The Garage where we could haul in crops and test the rotor and the cleaning system," says Gustafson. "The Garage was pretty secret. We did a lot of things in there we wanted to keep under wraps. Only a small group of engineers, maybe six or eight of us, was allowed access."

Often, I would travel to a field test site, and you couldn't tell anyone where you were going. The field machines had padlocked security doors and were often guarded at night.

"For a young engineer, it was as an exciting time to work there."

The 25-year run of Axial-Flow combines has been equally exciting — being on the cutting edge of harvesting technology.

Actually, the Case IH reputation for innovative harvest technology goes back to the mid-1800s to the inventions of the McCormick reaper and the Case thresher. For a century and a half, the company has lived up to the promise of harvesting higher-quality grain and more of it. Now, the latest chapter is the Case IH celebration of a quarter-century of Axial-Flow combines.

Our field vacuums combine impressive power, large capacities, ease of use and long-term reliability.

The Brouwer BV85 Vac, the largest capacity vacuum unit of its kind, is ideal for fast, economical cleanup of large turf and hard surface areas. It's easy to maneuver the BV85, bringing its wide pickup head (up to 120 inches) and powerful suction fan to bear on any kind of debris. Unloading is easy, thanks to its hydraulically driven conveyor.

The mid-size Brouwer BV138 Vac is designed for hard-to-reach areas that require a compact, maneuverable machine. The BV138 features heavy-duty impeller fans, creating a mulching effect on debris before it enters the hopper to significantly increase capacity. And, the BV138's hydraulic lift makes unloading simple.

Two great vacs. One great name. For the best in field vacuums, visit your Brouwer dealer today.

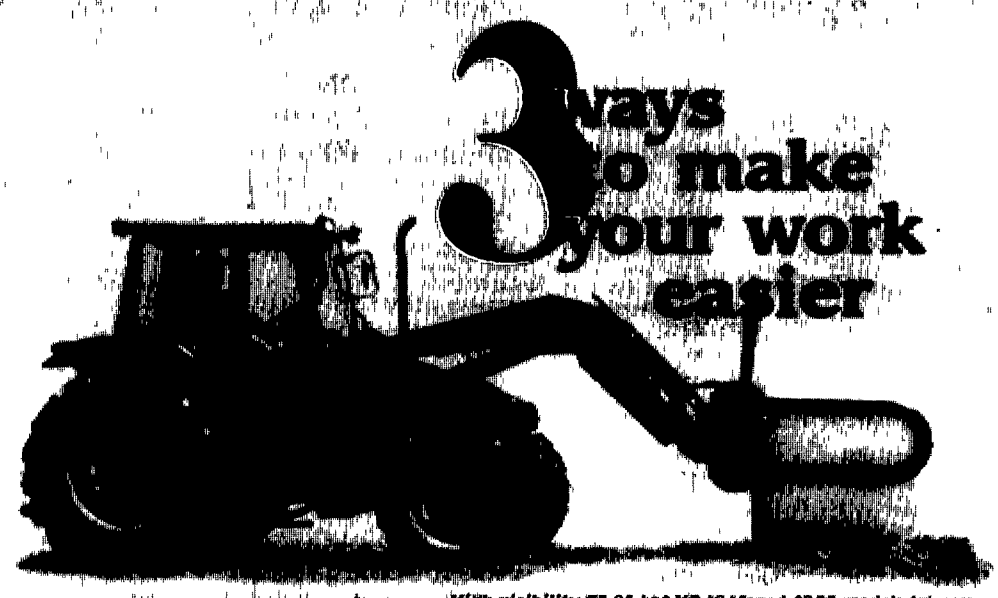
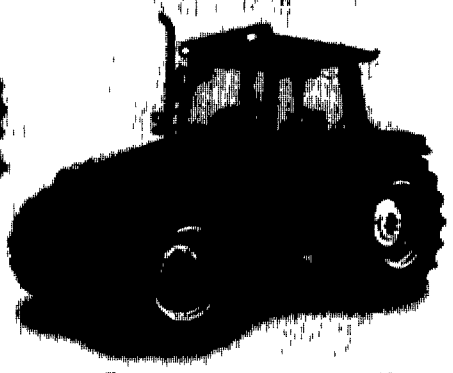
3 ways to make your work easier



High-visibility 75-85 hp MF 4245 and 4255 models let you easily see the ground and work right in front of the tractor. They're ideal for loaders, row crops, and other tasks where forward view is paramount.*

Standard MF 4200 Series models from 65-99 hp provide great all-round visibility, a wide choice of features and options, plus outstanding comfort, performance, and value for all jobs.*



Low-profile 55 hp MF 4225 model combines the exceptional forward view of the high-visibility models with a lower cab (96-in. cab clearance on 16.9-30 tires)*

Check out the new MF 4200 Series tractors today at your nearby MF Dealer.

NEW HOLLAND

Building on a good thing

You might recognize the engines, drivelines and axles on the new New Holland TS tractors. They have excellent reputations based on past performance. Thousands of customers have put these components to hard use and benefited from their performance and durability.

So, New Holland wasn't about to change a good thing. They made other improvements to these 70- to 90-PTO-hp tractors instead – like increasing the horsepower, improving the comfort of the cab, relocating the fuel tank for added convenience, adding a top road speed of 25 mph, upgrading the electrical system and adding outlets and modernizing the styling.

Better see these exciting 70- to 90-PTO-hp TS tractors for yourself. And find out how good design can become even better.

Metal Roofing & Siding

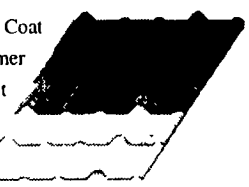
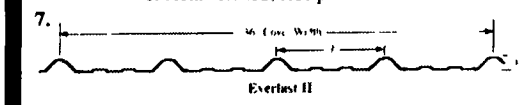
The Ultimate G-100 Process

"The Best"



1. Valspar 10S Finish Coat
2. Epoxy Primer
3. Zinc Phosphate Pretreatment
4. G-100 Zinc Coating
5. Full Hard Steel (80,000 min yield)
6. Heat formed, less paint cracks
7.



Everlast II

NOTE! It is more important what is under the paint than what you see on top!

1 One of the best paints, superior acid rain, cracking resistance and color retention

2 Primer coat promotes outstanding top coat adhesion

3 Zinc phosphate pretreatment This is a very important process - if your current supplier cannot supply you with this or does not know you should reconsider

4 G-100 Galvanized Most metal roofing has approx 40% less galvanized under the paint G-100 is more galvanized than most unpainted panels

5 Full Hard Anything less than full hard will bend easier, lower snow loads, etc

6 Heat formed Metal is painted before ribs are formed Most paint cracks at bends, heat forming greatly reduces cracks (check metal siding that is installed for 5-10 years)

7 Stronger design, superior strength, more metal per L F

8 Add Everything Together And Price Should Be $53 37 Per Square $1 69 Per L F

OUR SPECIAL PRICE ONLY
$46.74 PER SQUARE
$1.48 PER LINEAL FT.

Waterbeds for Cows

ALANTA®

The ALANTA Waterbed for cows is a revolutionary product, comfortable, safe and hygienic. It clearly improves your cows' well-being and therefore promotes higher milk production. It is the ultimate stall floor covering for the modern, animal-friendly dairy farm.

WELL MADE
The ALANTA Waterbed is made of two rubber layers with a water-filled compartment in between. GD-Enerka gives a 10-year guarantee.

COMFORTABLE
The waterbed molds itself to the cow's shape. It's cool in summer and pleasantly warm in winter.

SAFE
Thanks to the non-slip rubber upper surface, the cow is gripped firmly and cannot slip off. In this way the ALANTA waterbed keeps damage to hooves to a minimum.

Here's What Some of Your Neighbors Say About Alanta Waterbeds:

Dale Hindman, Brockway, PA
"We have seen a big savings in the amount of bedding we use and I believe the durability of the beds will be excellent over time."

Harlan Hoover, Imler, PA
"I am pleased with waterbeds. Cow comfort is excellent."

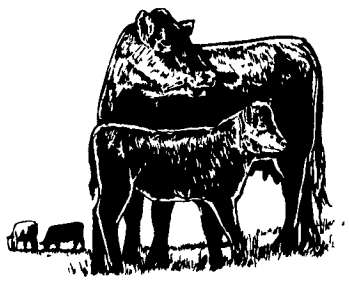
BEEF TIPS

Do you have a small herd of beef cattle?



If you do, yours is like most herds in the Eastern United States. With small herds, you can't afford to have unproductive or under-productive cows. Now may be the time to introduce replacement heifers into your herd--one or two at a time. Call 1-800-525-1168 for a free directory, listing ALL breeders in your area.

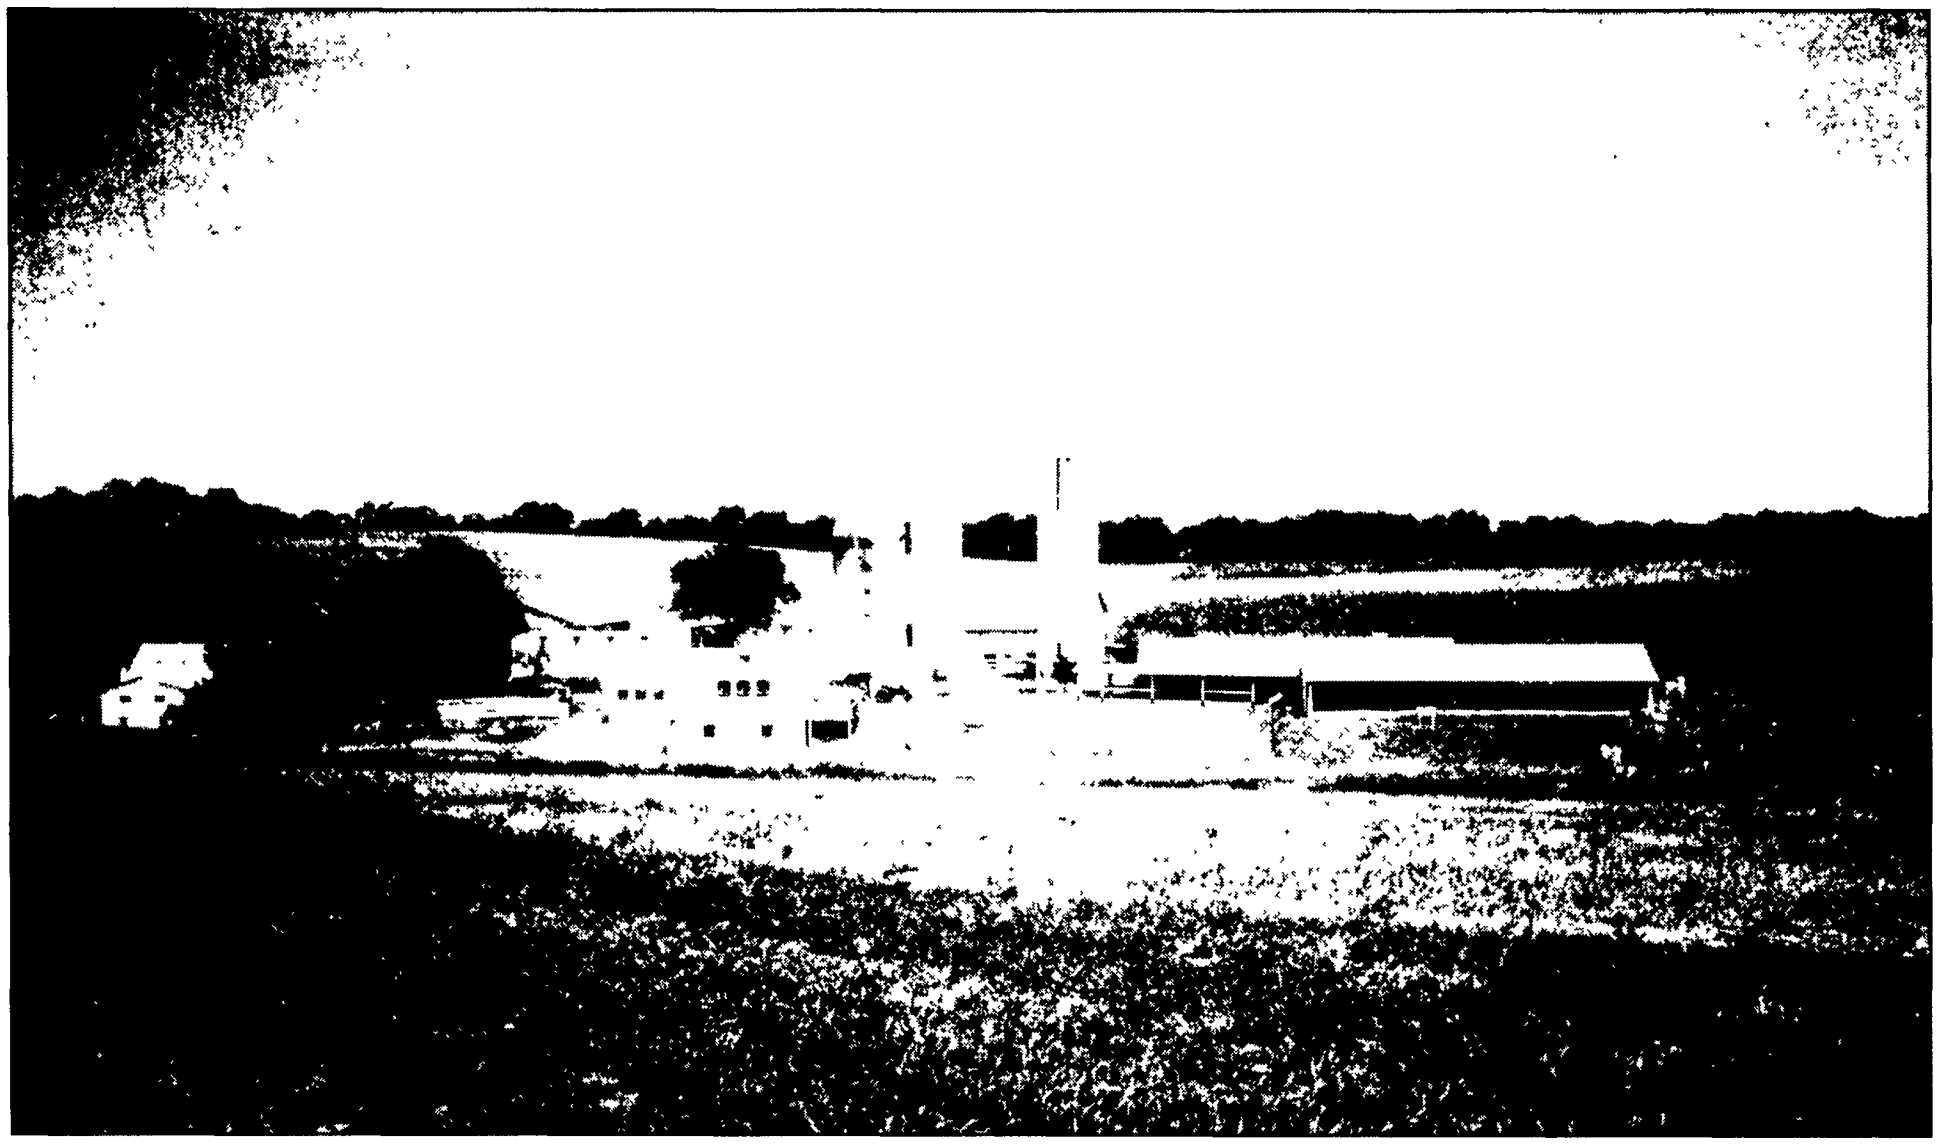
Berks County Hook Farms



Since 1955, McCullough Hook has hosted about 27,000 children from schools all over Berks County on this well-kept farm near Womelsdorf.

At 88, Hook is still involved in the operation which includes a milking herd of 42 Holsteins on 119 acres. Three grandchildren, Deborah Hook, James Hook, and Cindy Sholl, also work on the farm.

Except for the original houses and barn, Hook said he constructed all of the buildings on the property, which was originally purchased by his parents in 1921.

Hook said he is the oldest milk producer who ships milk to Clover Farms Dairy.

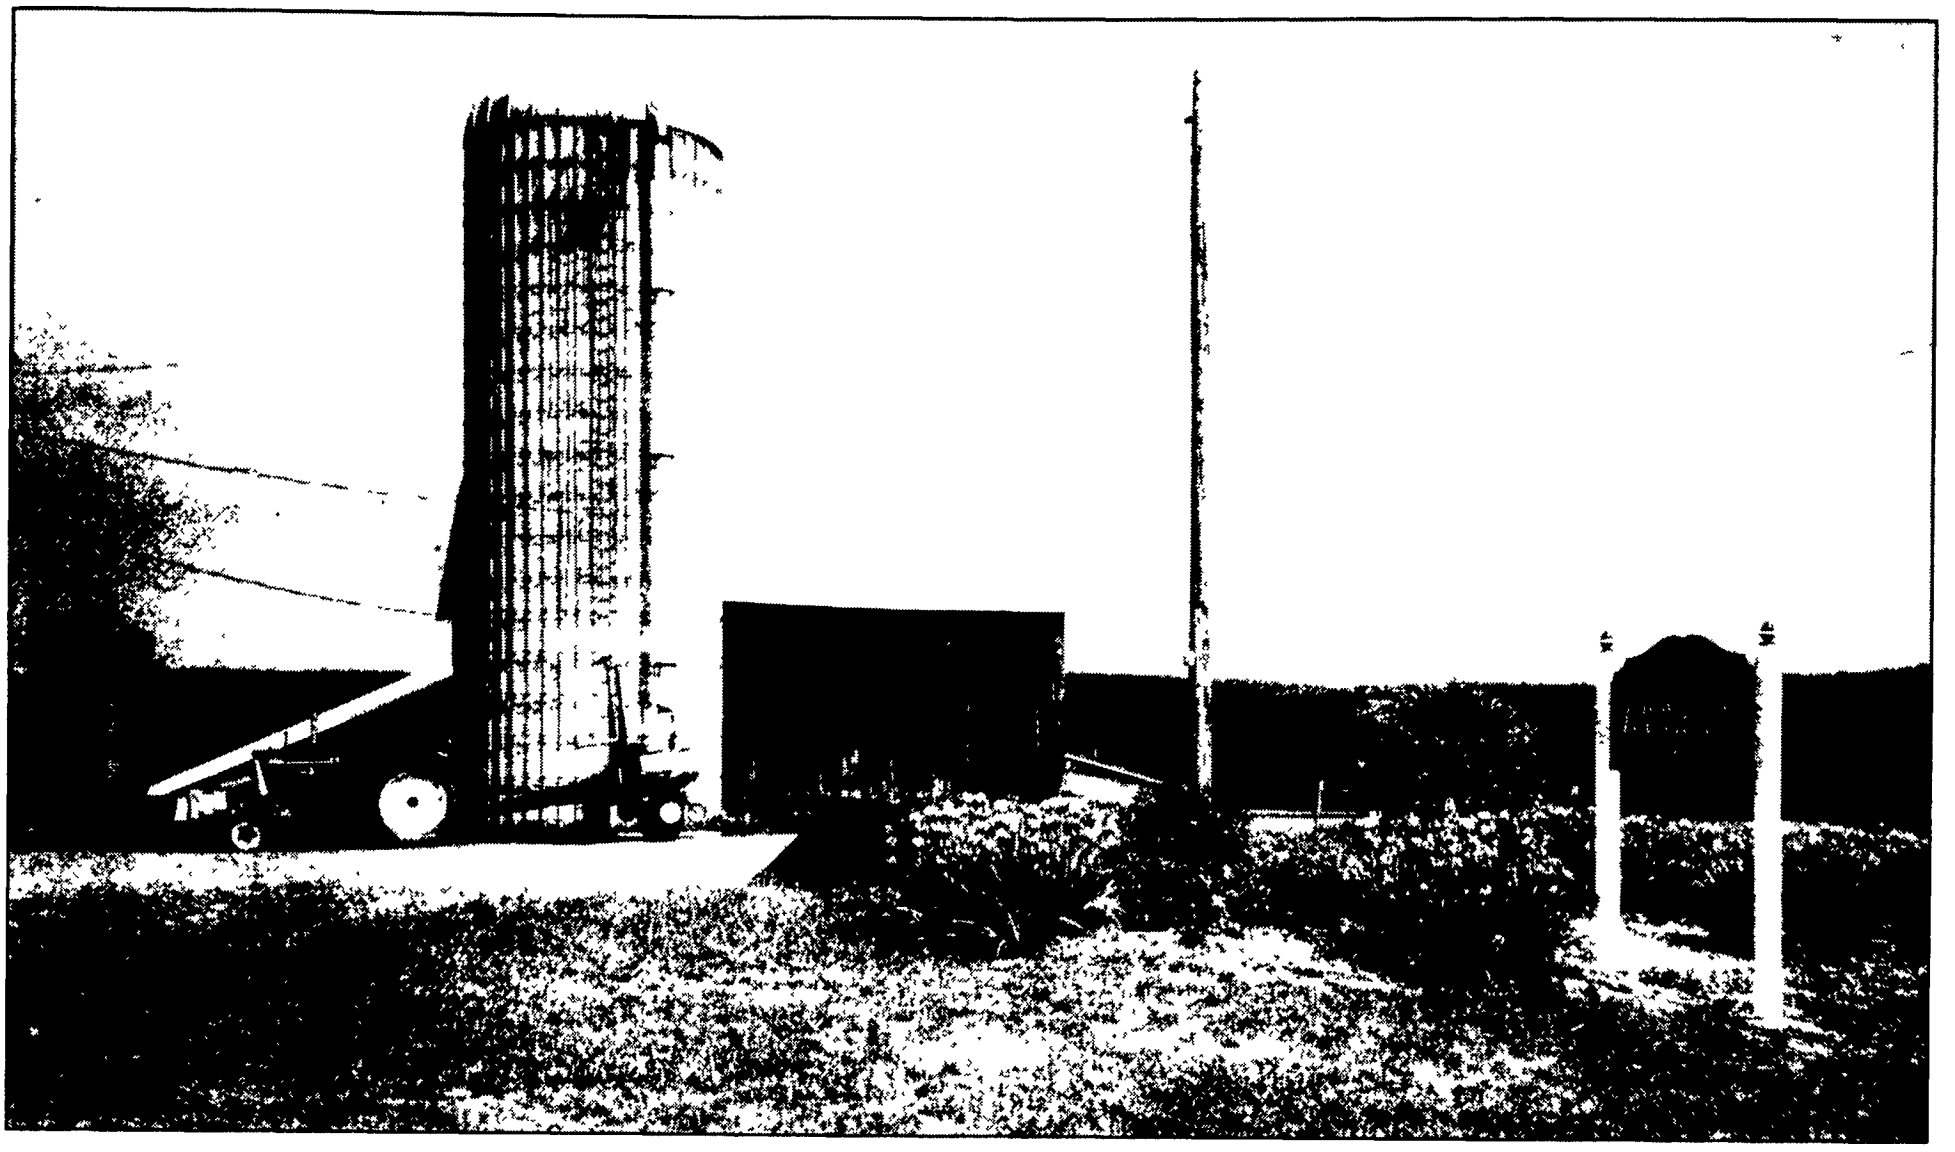
Tioga County

Four Wynds Farm



Elwin N. and Charlene Fitch milk about 45 Holsteins and several Jerseys on this attractive 260- acre homestead in Tioga County.

Four Wynds Farm has been in the family for more than 100 years, giving it the dual honor of being eligible for a Century Farm Award as well as recognition as a Dairy of Distinction.

Elwin said that his great-uncle was born on the farm and died recently at age 105.

The Fitches bought the farm in 1976 from Elwin's father Elwin T. Fitch, and raised two daughters and a son on the farm. Laura, Lisa, and Bryan continue to be involved with the farm whenever they can.

Dear Friends:

Greetings from the Secretary of Agriculture.

Congratulations for being selected to receive the Dairy of Distinction Award. Pennsylvania is a national leader in the dairy industry; and, you are helping to lead the way to excellence. For sure, the Dairy of Distinction Award is a tribute to your sterling advancement of the dairy profession. Dairy farms are a cornerstone of our agriculture economy. Crystal Spring Farm

Crystal Spring Farm in the Juniata Valley got its name from a "very good, pure spring," said Barbara Brubaker, who manages the farm along with her sons Conrad and Eric, their wives Dawn and Michelle, and six grandchildren.

Brubaker said the farm and spring are locally famous as a historical watering stop for horses.

The Brubakers continue to have plenty of clean water from the spring for the milking herd of about 70 Holstein milking cows and 65 replacement heifers that live on this inviting property.

Barbara was born on Crystal Springs Farm. Her father had moved there when he was three years old. Besides Conrad and Eric, Barbara also raised two daughters on the farm, Amy and Faye.

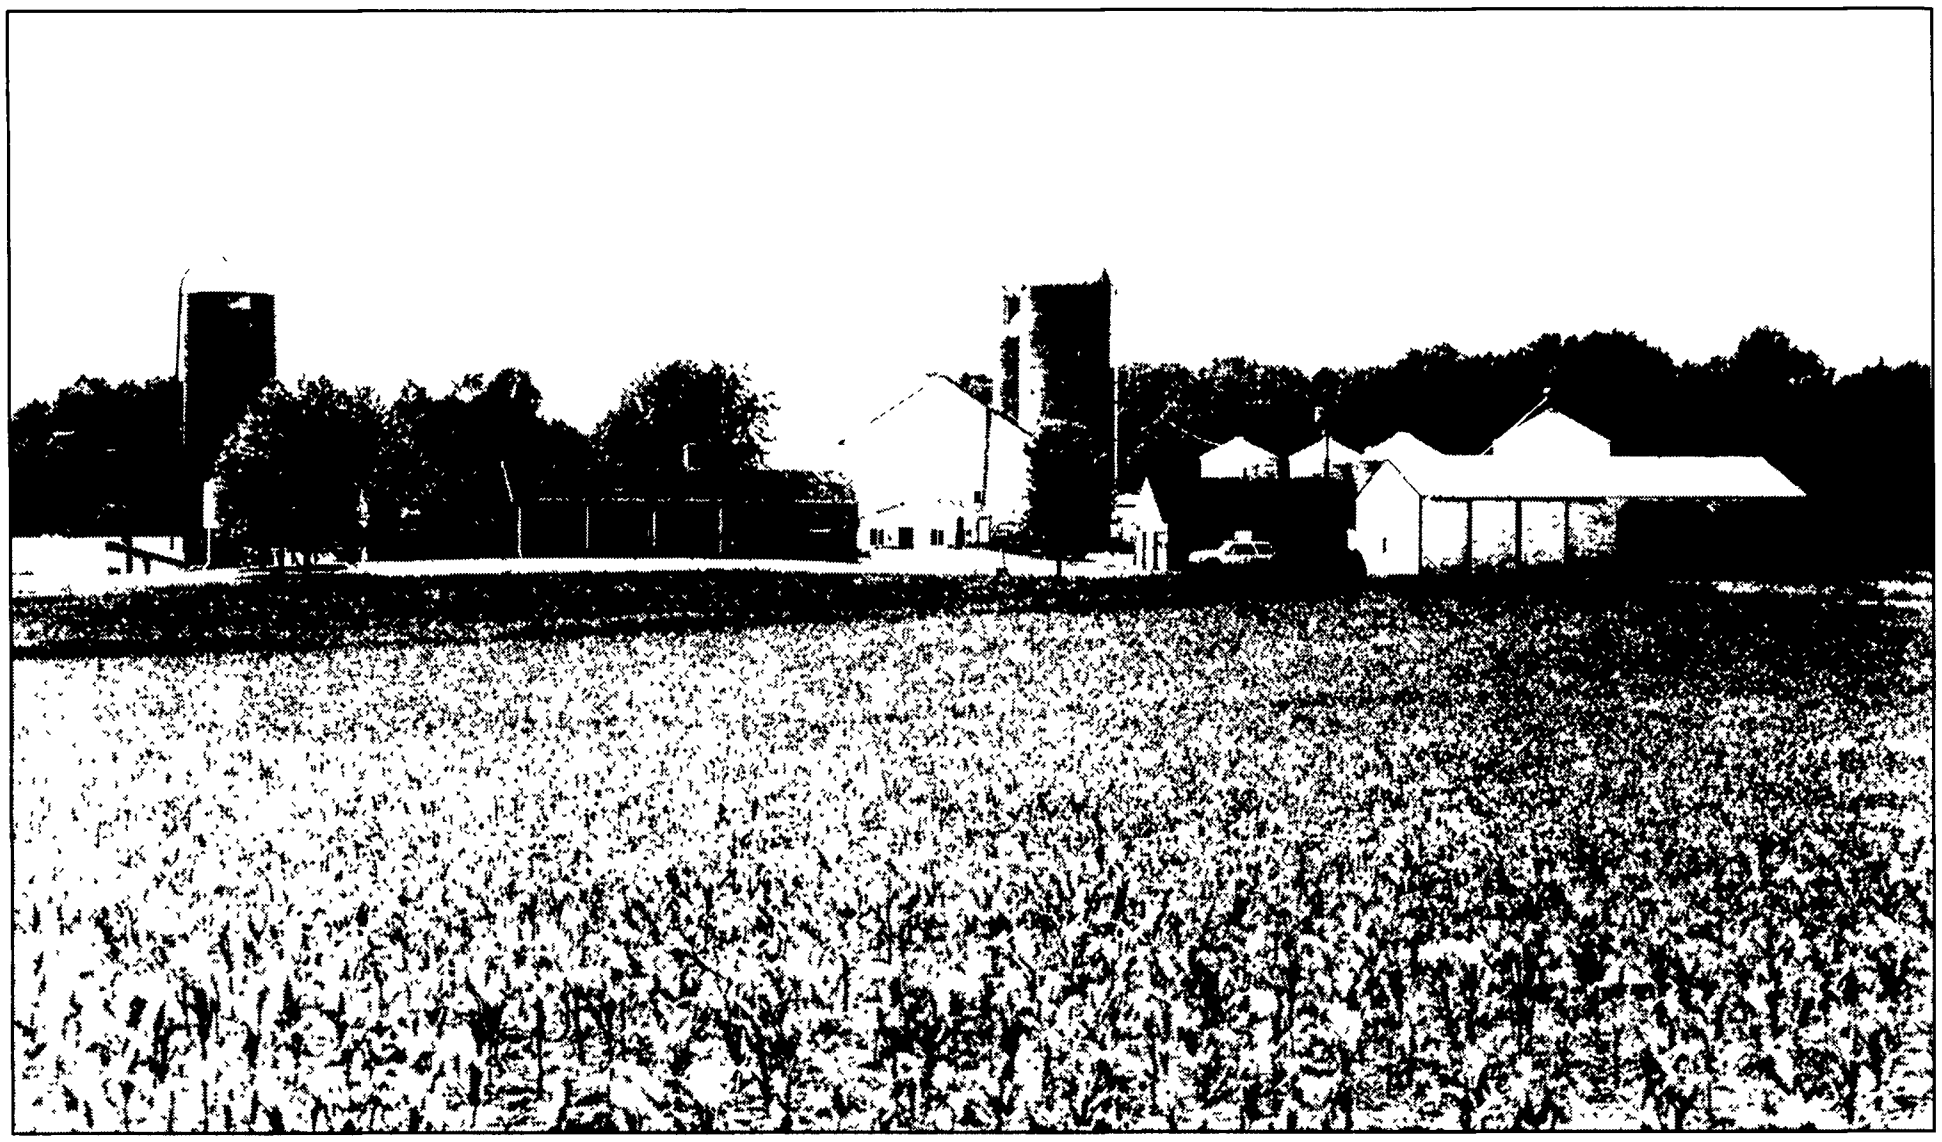
Kemdale Farms



Counting the great-grandchildren of Ken and Beverly McConnell, the McConnell family has placed five generations on this Lawrence County farm.

Jeff and Gary, sons of Ken McConnell, along with wives Roberta and Anna, now manage the milking herd of 85 Holsteins and raise crops for feed on the 400-acre farm.

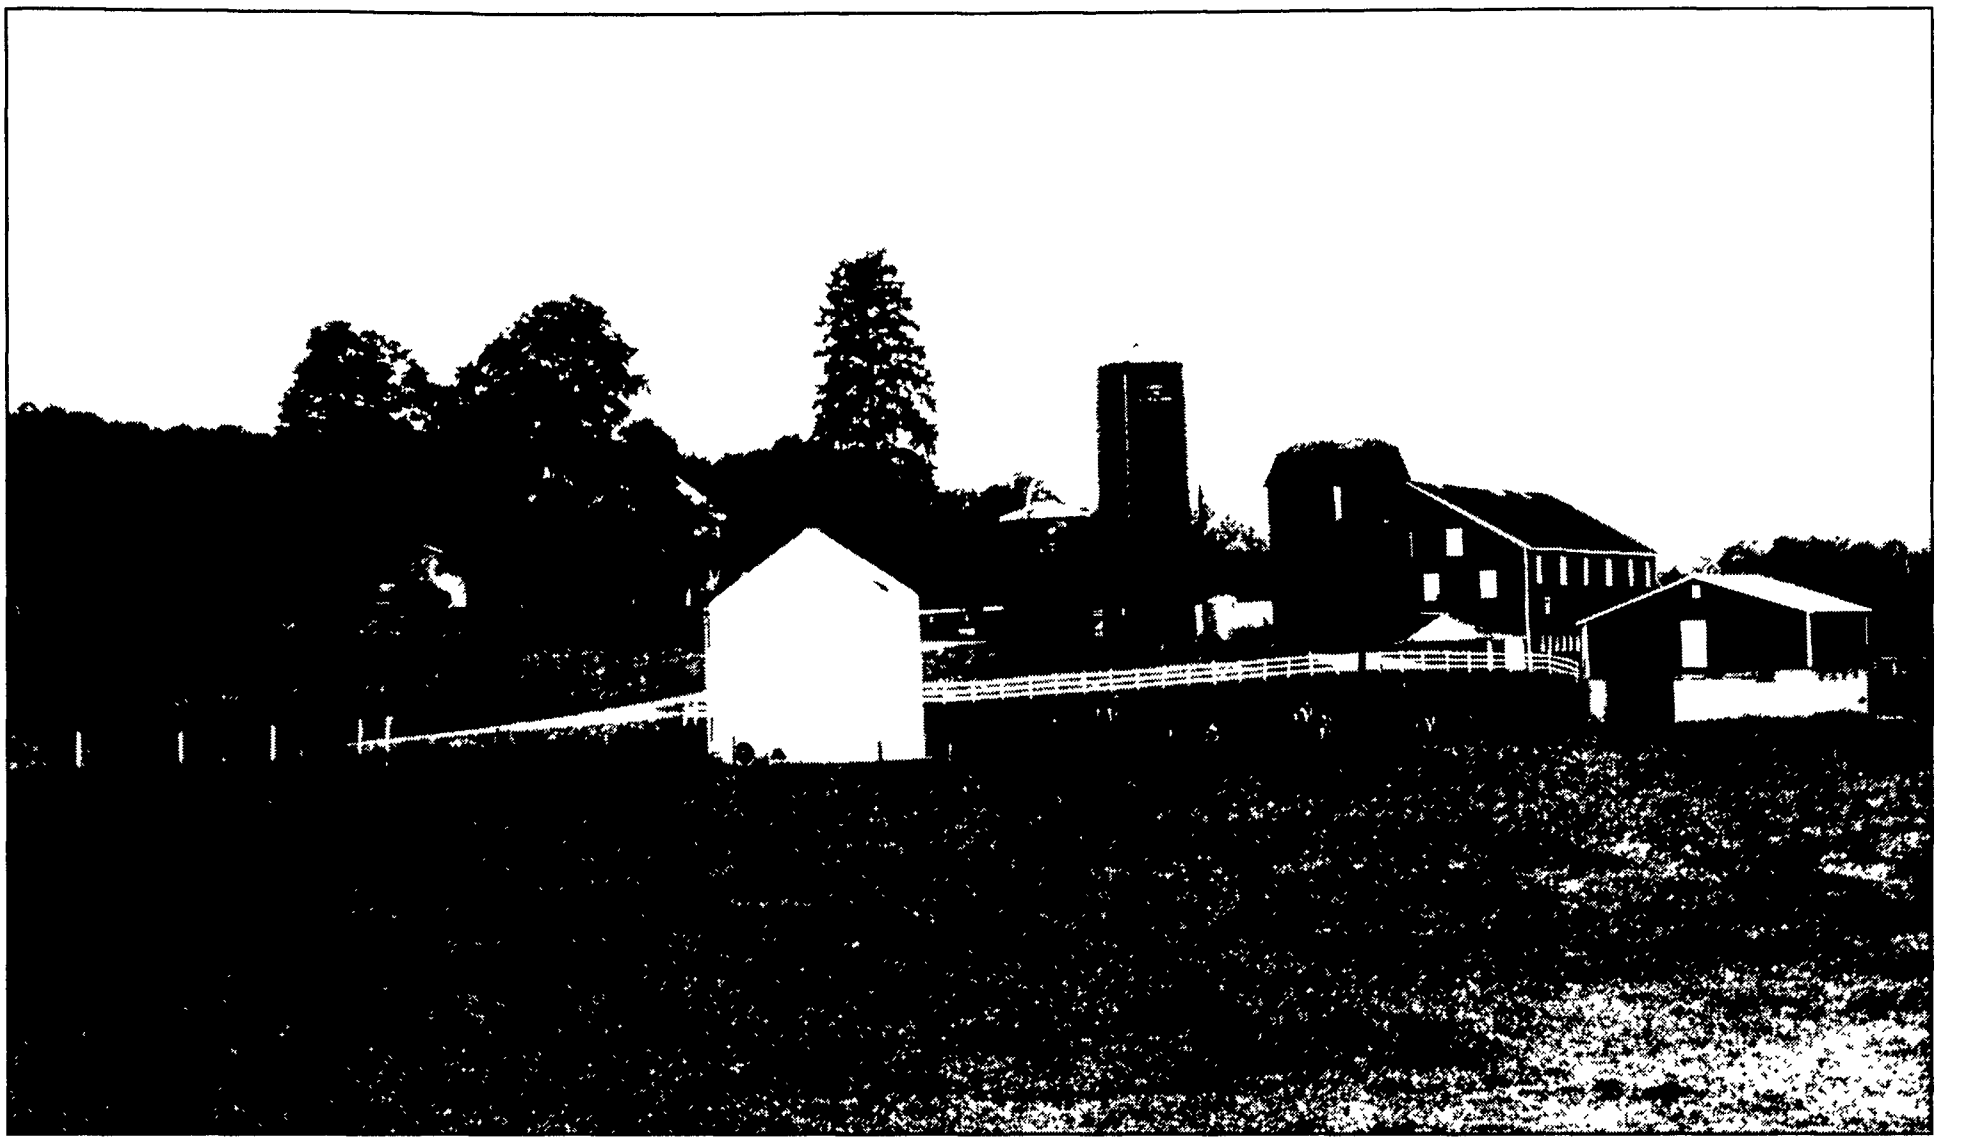
Somerset County

Claradale Farms



Clark and Vera Yoder own and manage this Somerset County farm in partnership with sons Bob and Rick.

The Yoders milk about 75 Holsteins in comfort stalls and farm a total of about 425 acres. They grow all of the haylage and high moisture corn for the cows, as well as selling oats, straw, and high moisture corn.

Clark said his father bought the home farm in 1952 and Clark and Vera took over about 1960. They named the farm Claradale by combining their first names to make "Clara."

Everyone works together on "keeping the place up," Clark said.

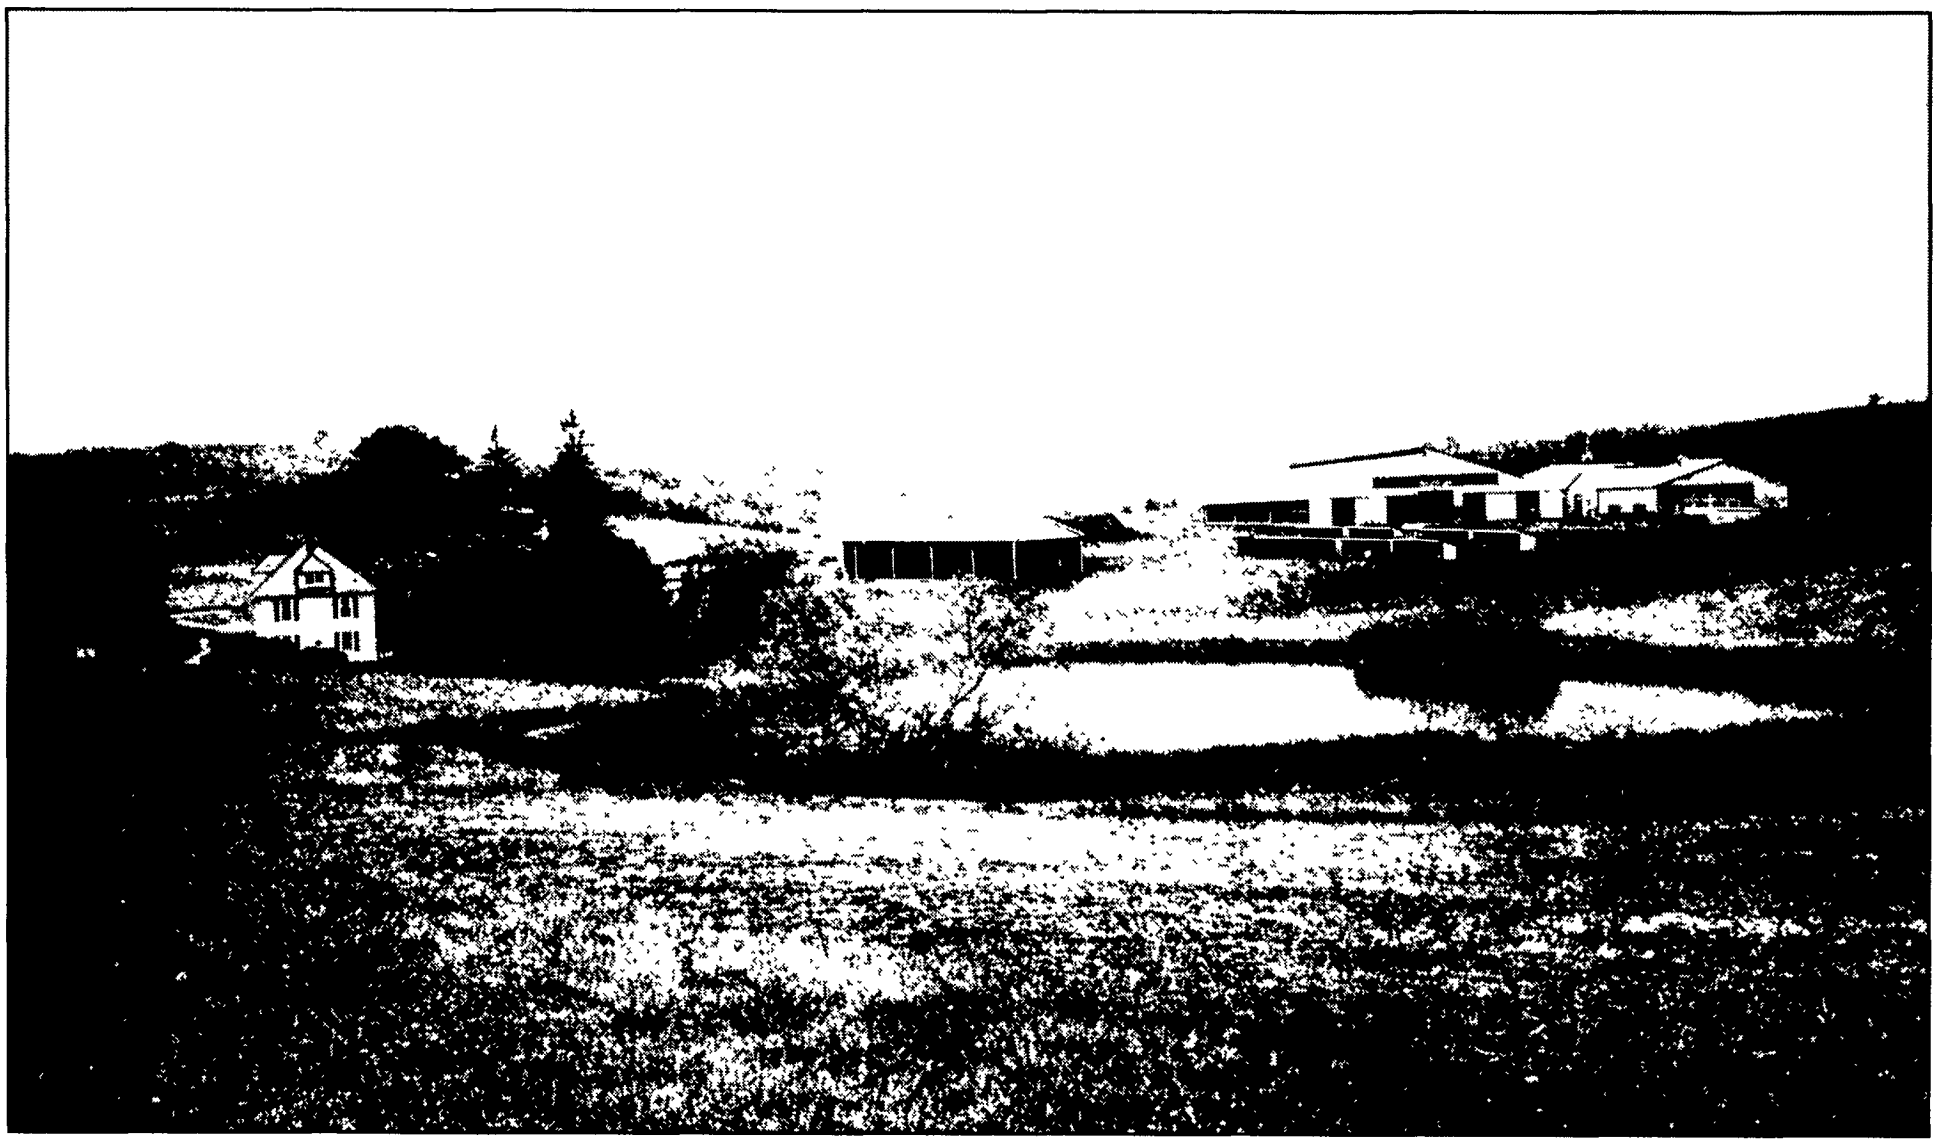
Penn Wood Farms



The extended Stoltzfus family keeps Pennwood Farms thriving as they tend a milking herd of about 400 Holsteins and 60 Jerseys and grow about 800 acres of corn and hay.

A partnership of parents Harvey and Mary Jane, with sons Don, Glen, Duane, and Dwight along with wives Joanne, Gail, Andrea, and Melanie get the crops in and the milk in the tank, while keeping the farmstead in ship-shape condition.

Duane said that women are "very much involved" in the farming operation and maintenance of the property.

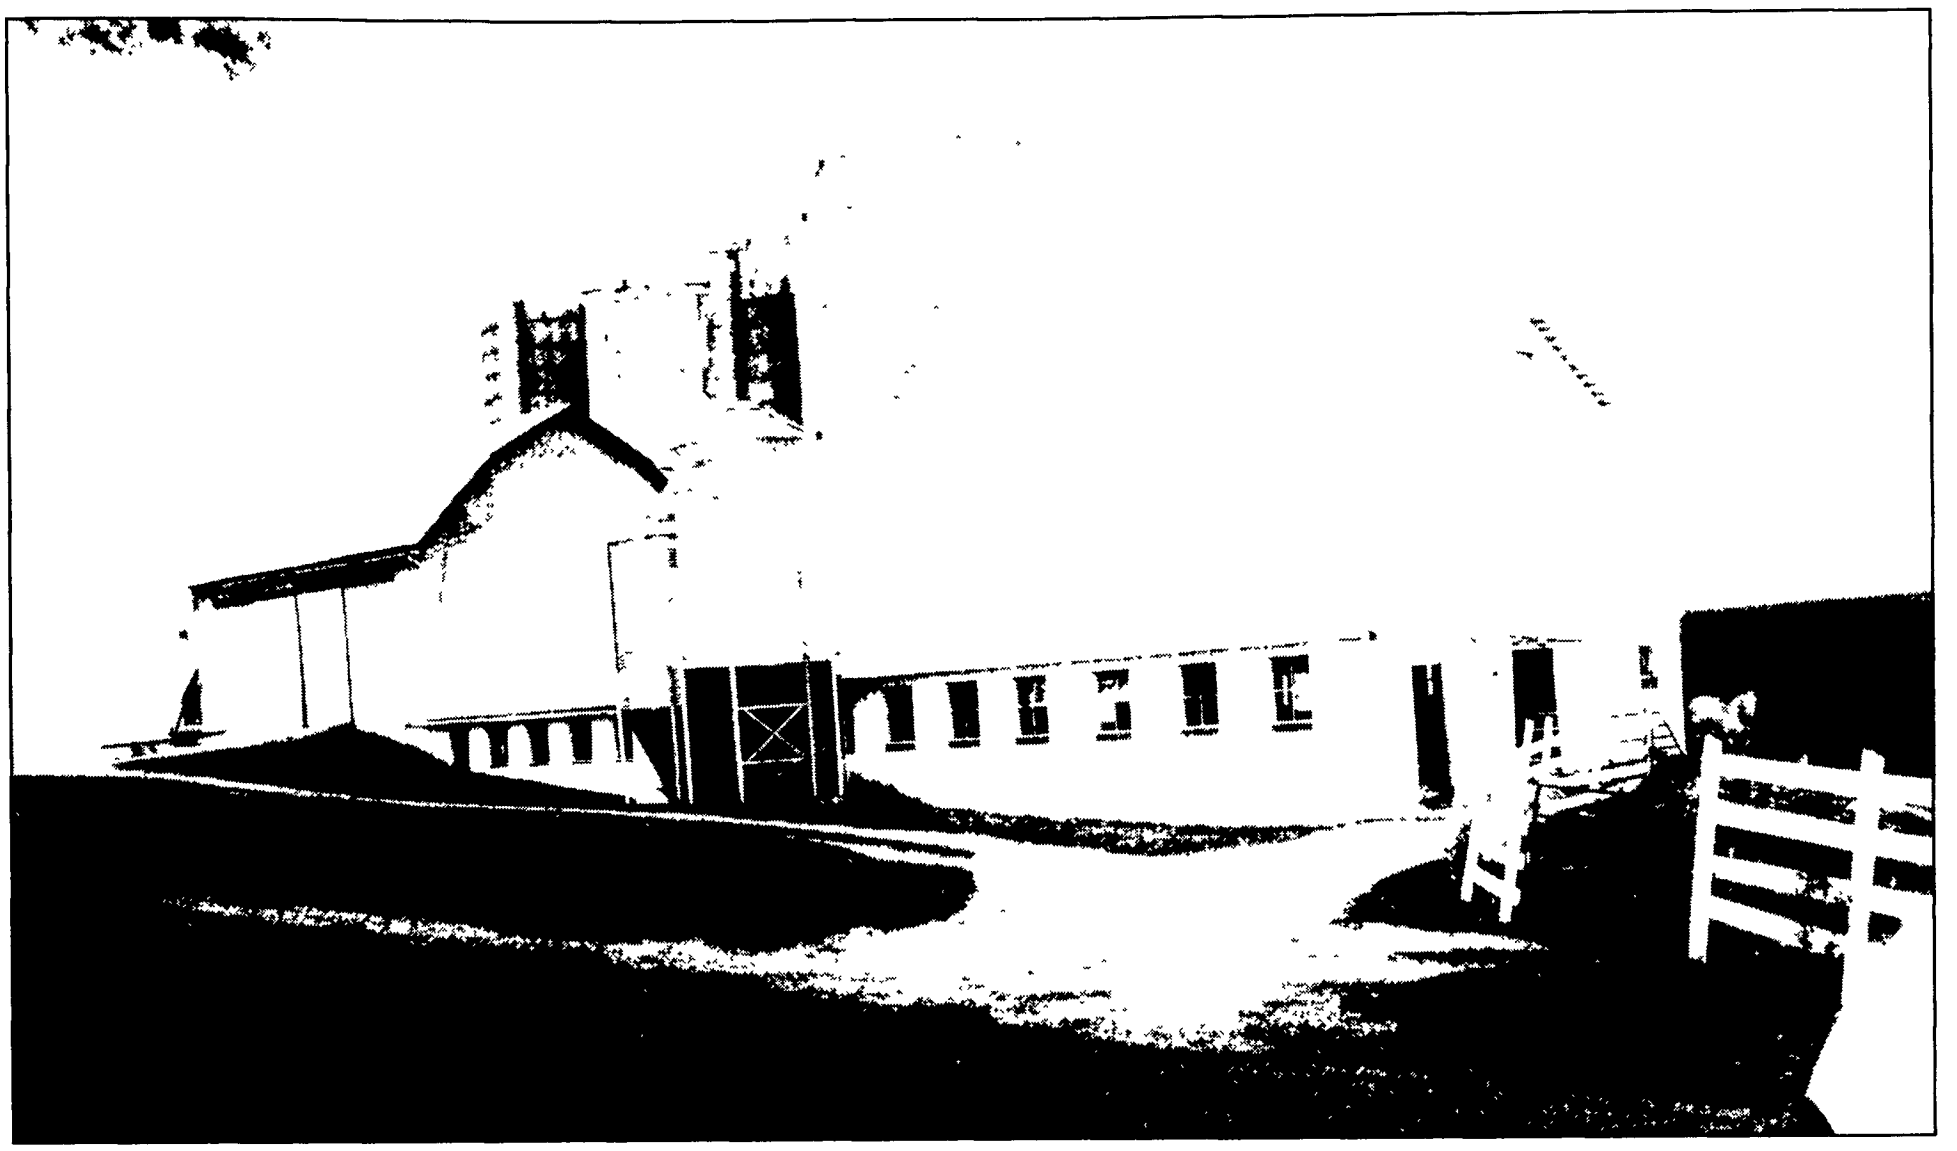
Glemboski Farm



Featuring Holstein/Jersey crossbreds, this Susquehanna County farm is owned by Betty Glemboski. Glenn and Arlene Stevens recently took over its management.

Betty Glemboski said, "After spending our life working and building a farm to be proud of, we had to rent it out. It was the answer to a prayer to have Glenn (Stevens) and his family come along. They are excellent caretakers and wonderful neighbors, especially since the illness and recent death of my husband of 52 years. I hope they have many more rewarding years here."

Meadowside Farm

When a fire destroyed the original Meadowside dairy barn in April 1997, Jim Gilleran had it rebuilt and operating by October of the same year.

Jim and his brother Robert are the third generation in the family to work the land on this Susquehanna County farm, taking over the operation from parents Robert and Alice Gilleran. The younger Robert's wife Rachel and their two children also help on the farm.

The Gillerans run a grazing operation for about 45 milking cows and grow forages on about 500 acres.

Father Robert is still responsible for a lot of the mowing and trimming that helps make the property stand out, Jim said.

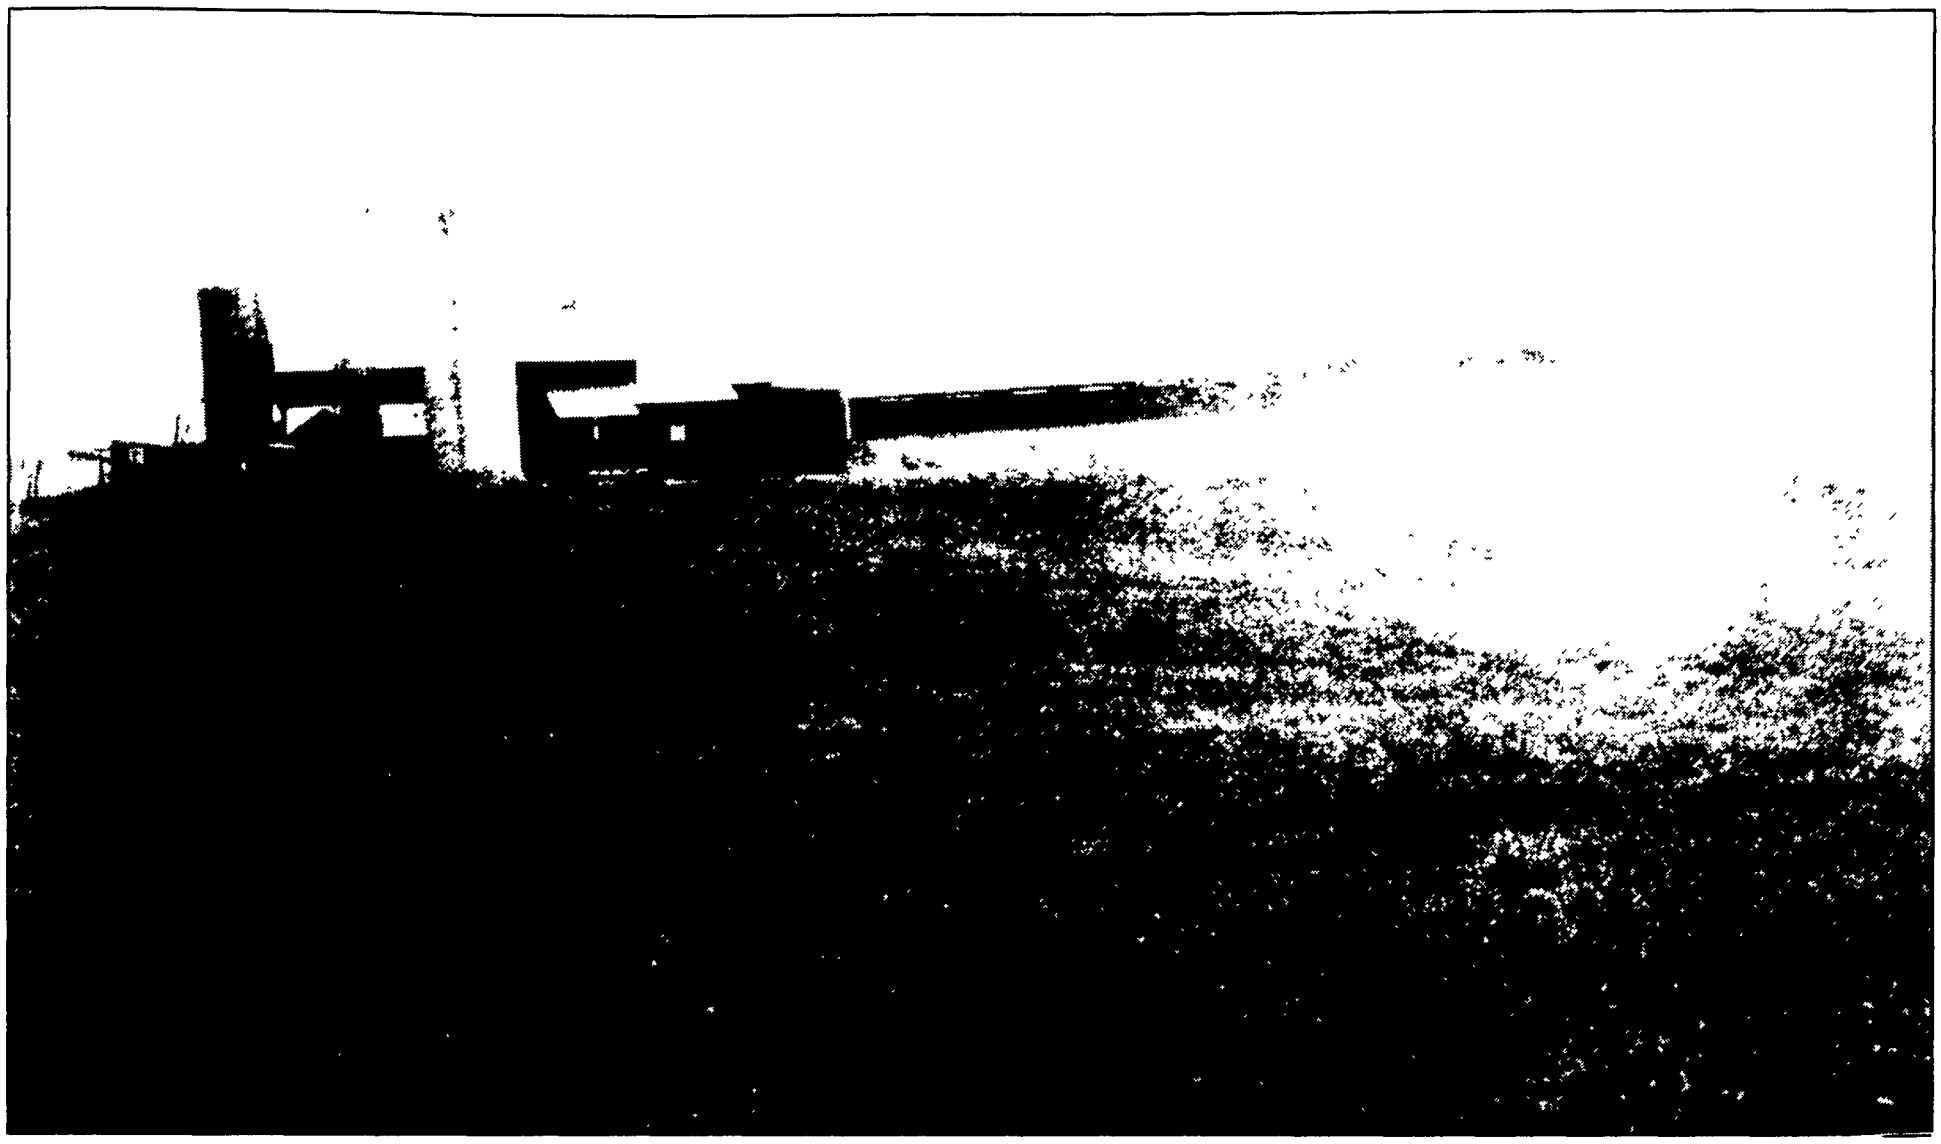
Wayne County Henderson Farm



Albert Henderson grew up on this farm and is now seeing his grandchildren work on it.

According to Albert's wife Theresa, everybody helps out, especially during busy times such as haymaking. That includes son Jack and his wife Kathy, who are responsible for most of the farm work, son Jeff and wife Debby, and grandchildren Rebecca, 19, Brooke, 17, and Richie, 15.

The Hendersons raise alfalfa and clover on the 360-acre farm and milk about 90 Holsteins. The cows are on a combination grazing/total mixed ration feeding program. Daughter-in-law Kathy gets much of the credit for the clean environment on the farmstead. Theresa said, "(She) keeps it nice and neat."

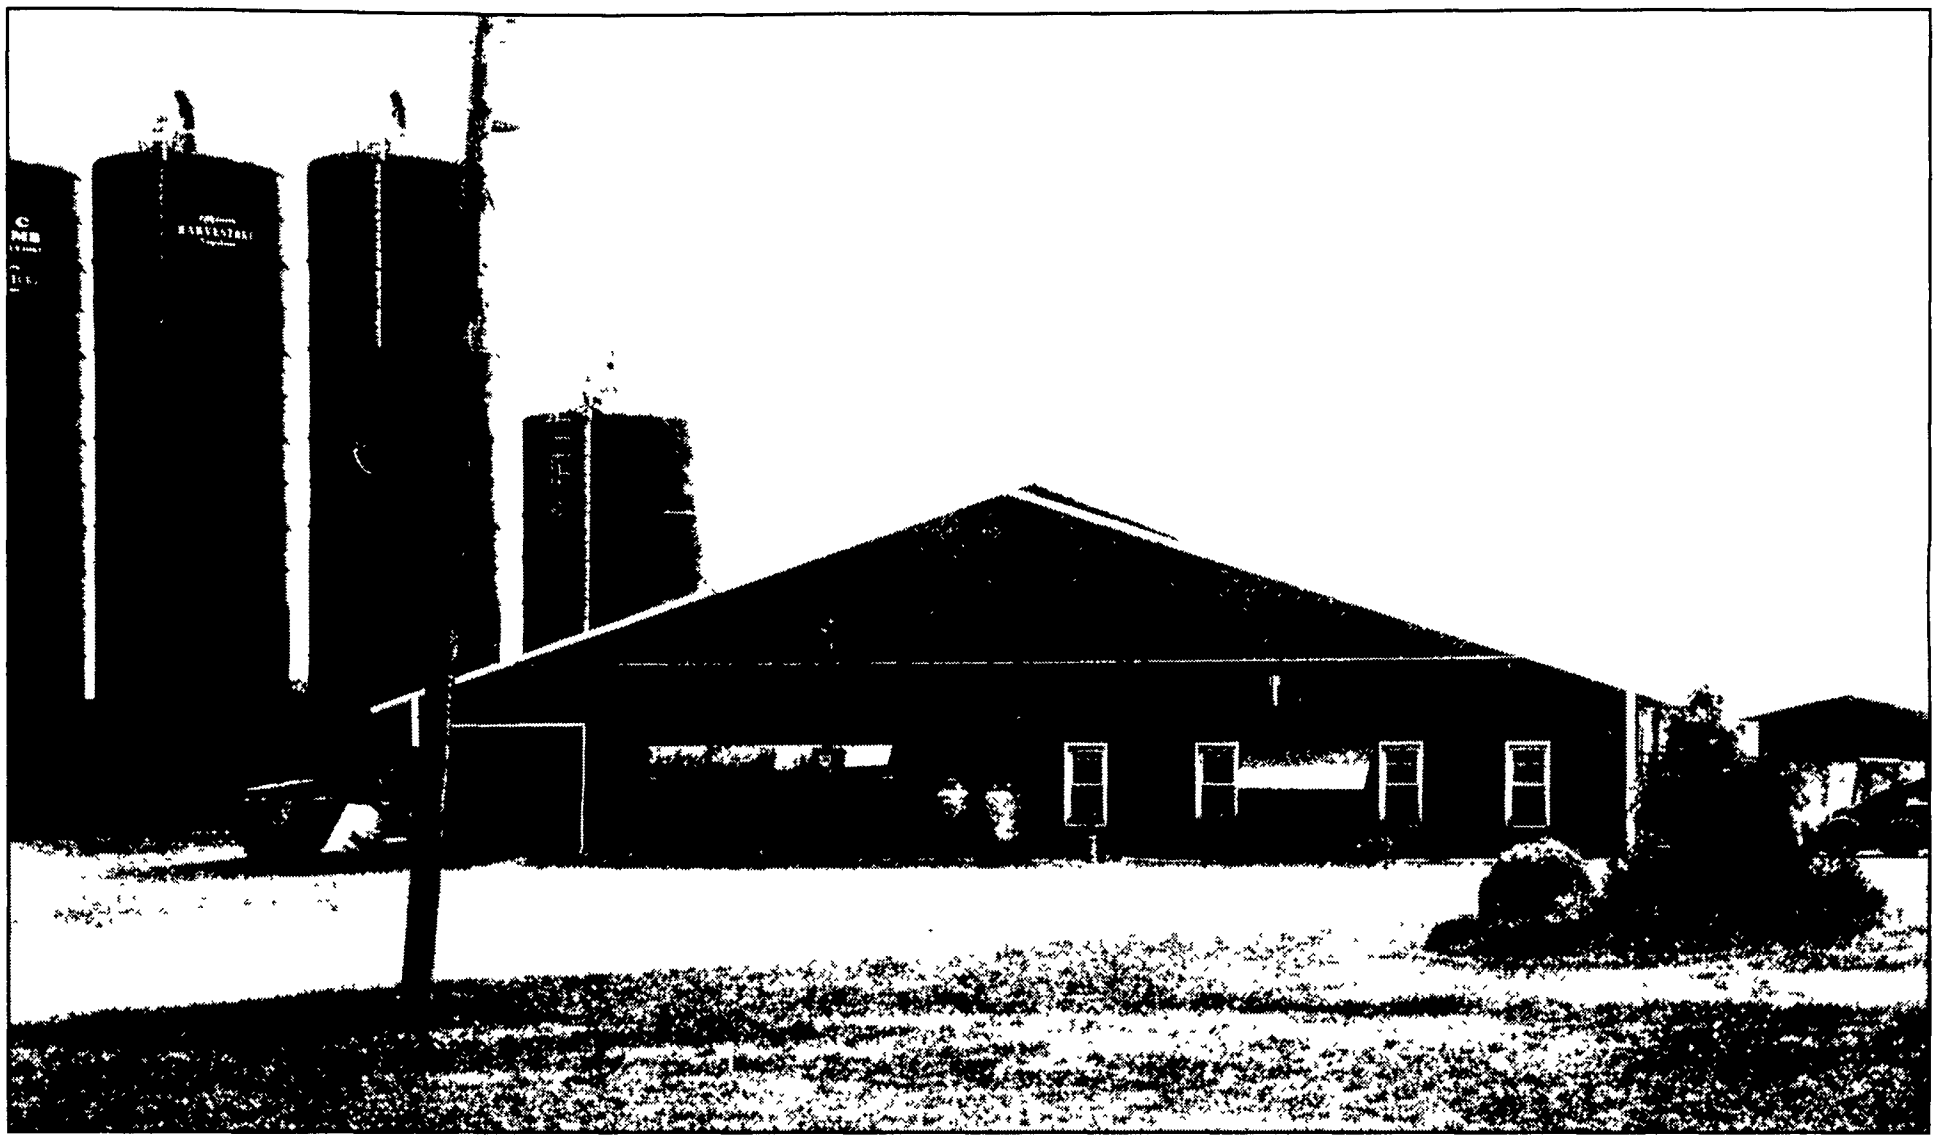
Dauphin County ETC Farms



Earl Campbell built this freestall barn and milking parlor facility on ETC Farm in 1986. Now his son Grant has taken over as herdsman for the 120 Holsteins that are milked on the well-kept grounds.

Earl is the field man, growing no-till corn and alfalfa as well as soybeans on about 700 acres to feed the herd. His wife Tamie, a daughter-in-law, and three additional sons also help out on the farm.

Earl gives credit to son Grant for his diligence in keeping the farmstead tidy and looking sharp.

A milking herd of about 500 Holsteins make their home on these pleasant grounds at Mains Dairy Inc. near Newville in Cumberland County.

Assistant herdsman Steve Carpenter said maintenance of the property is a group effort for the 10 individuals who earn their livelihood on the dairy.

Farm manager Dan Mains and his father Francis Mains believe in the importance of a positive image as milk producers, Carpenter said.

The Mains farm corn for silage and soybeans on about 1,000 acres for the bulk of the total mixed ration that is fed to the cows.

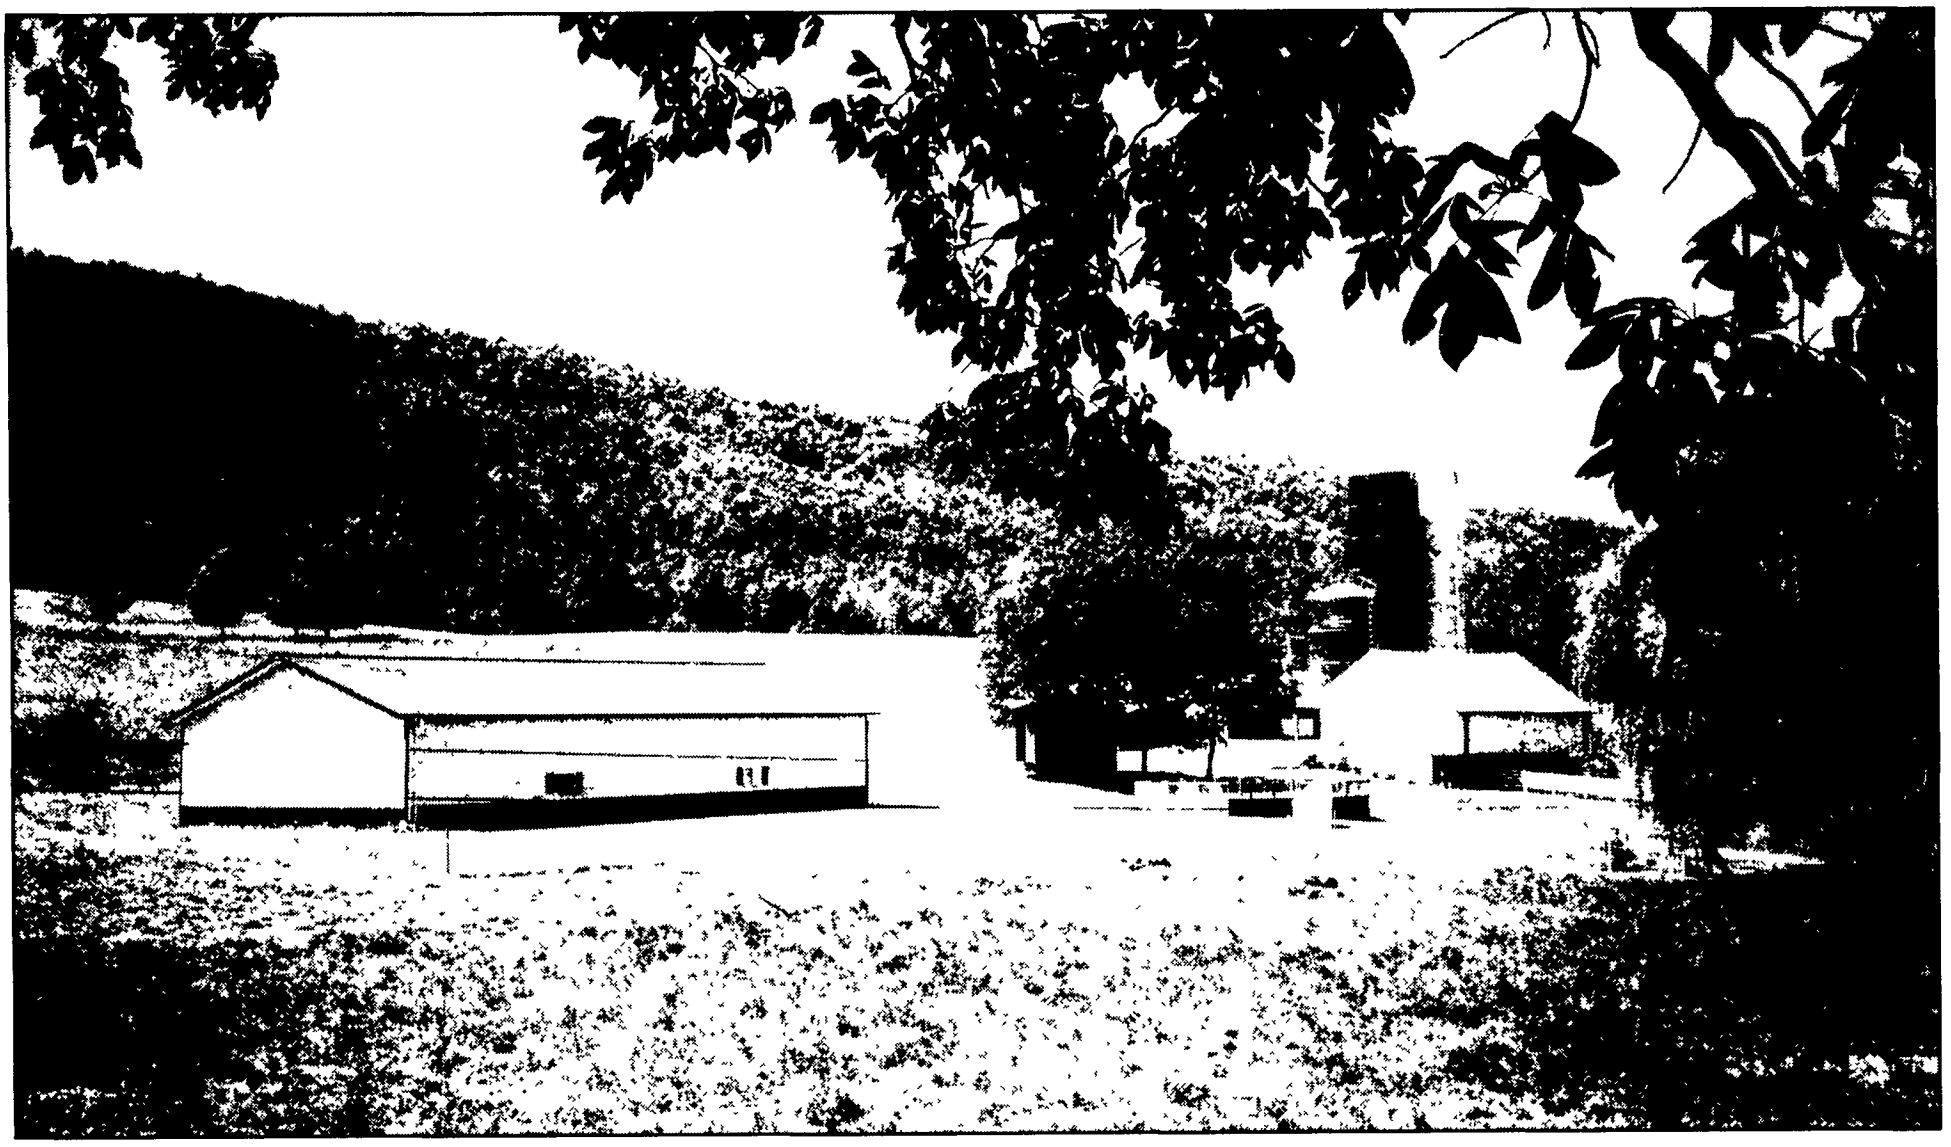
Mike & Michele Hawbaker



The Hawbakers purchased this picturesque farm in Shade Gap in 1994. They tend a milking herd of about 85 Holsteins, growing their own hay, corn, and soybeans to feed the dairy animals.

Since moving onto the property, they have added a new equipment shed and concrete silo while continuing to keep the farm grounds spruce and trim.

The Hawbakers began a family soon after moving to the farm and now boast three children — Makayla, 6, Bryce, 5, and Sadie, 2½. A fourth is expected in August.

Somerset County Jerry-Mill Farms

The Berkebiles grow hay, corn, and oats on the farm, including feed for the milking herd.

When it comes to who does the work to keep the farm grounds neat and pretty, Galen's wife Brenda said, "We all do." That includes children Dorsey, 12, and Chelsey, 8.

Jerry-Mill Farms was named by combining the name of Mildred's late husband, Jerry, and her own.

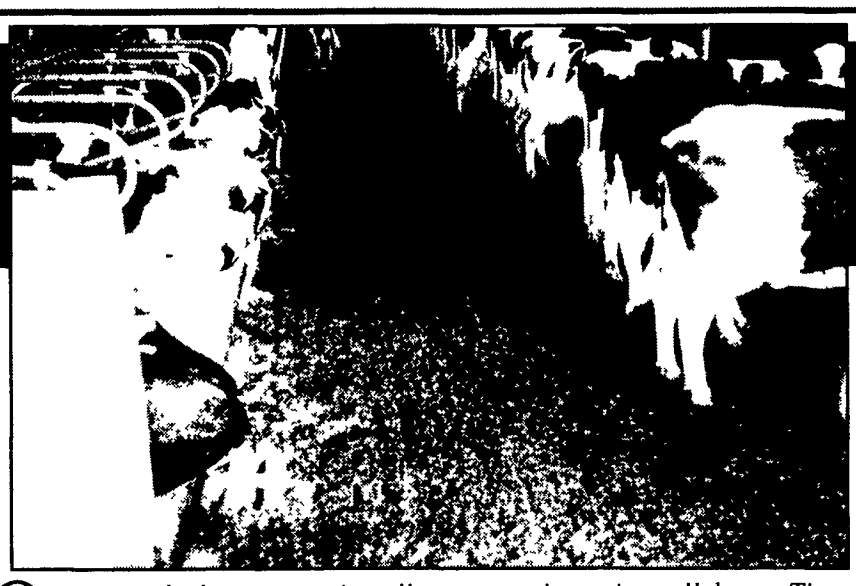
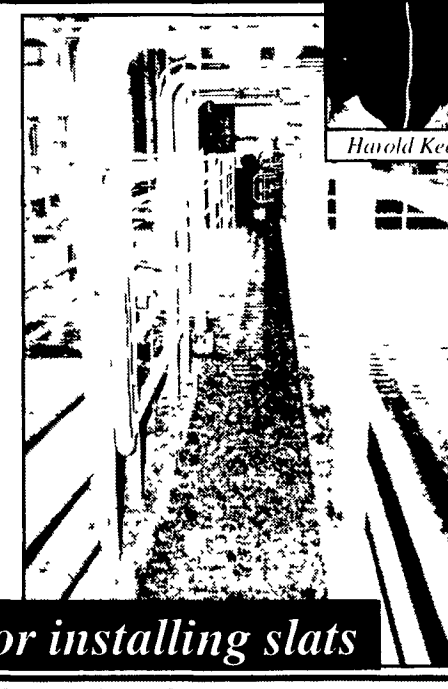
"WAFFLE SLAT" Syri-Con Corporation



"We would use slats again if doing it all over!"

Harold Keeney David Nancy & Mark Wolfskill



Our original plan was to install scrapers. But after 10 minutes in a slatted barn in Somerset County, we changed our minds. Some people stay away from slats because of the initial cost, but that extra cost is made up for in the first couple years.

The one thing I like the most about slats is that there is no expense. I don't have any scrapers or drive units to maintain. I don't have to run scrapers every day or haul manure like we did in our previous tie stall barn. The cows' foot health has been a lot better, and the cows stay much cleaner. Our milk production is up and the somatic cell count has gone down. I give at least some of the credit to the slats because with less moisture on the floor, there is less bacteria.

-David Wolfskill

Thank you, Wolfskills, for installing slats

Berks County Fawnridge Farms

The milking herd of 55 cows is made up of Holsteins, Brown Swiss, and Red and Whites. Treichler children Brandon, 20, Brett, 13, and Brittni, 10, are involved with showing dairy animals as well as helping out on the farm. Brandon is also an animal science major at Penn State.

Keith's father bought the property in 1952 and still helps with the farm work and keeping the grass mowed.

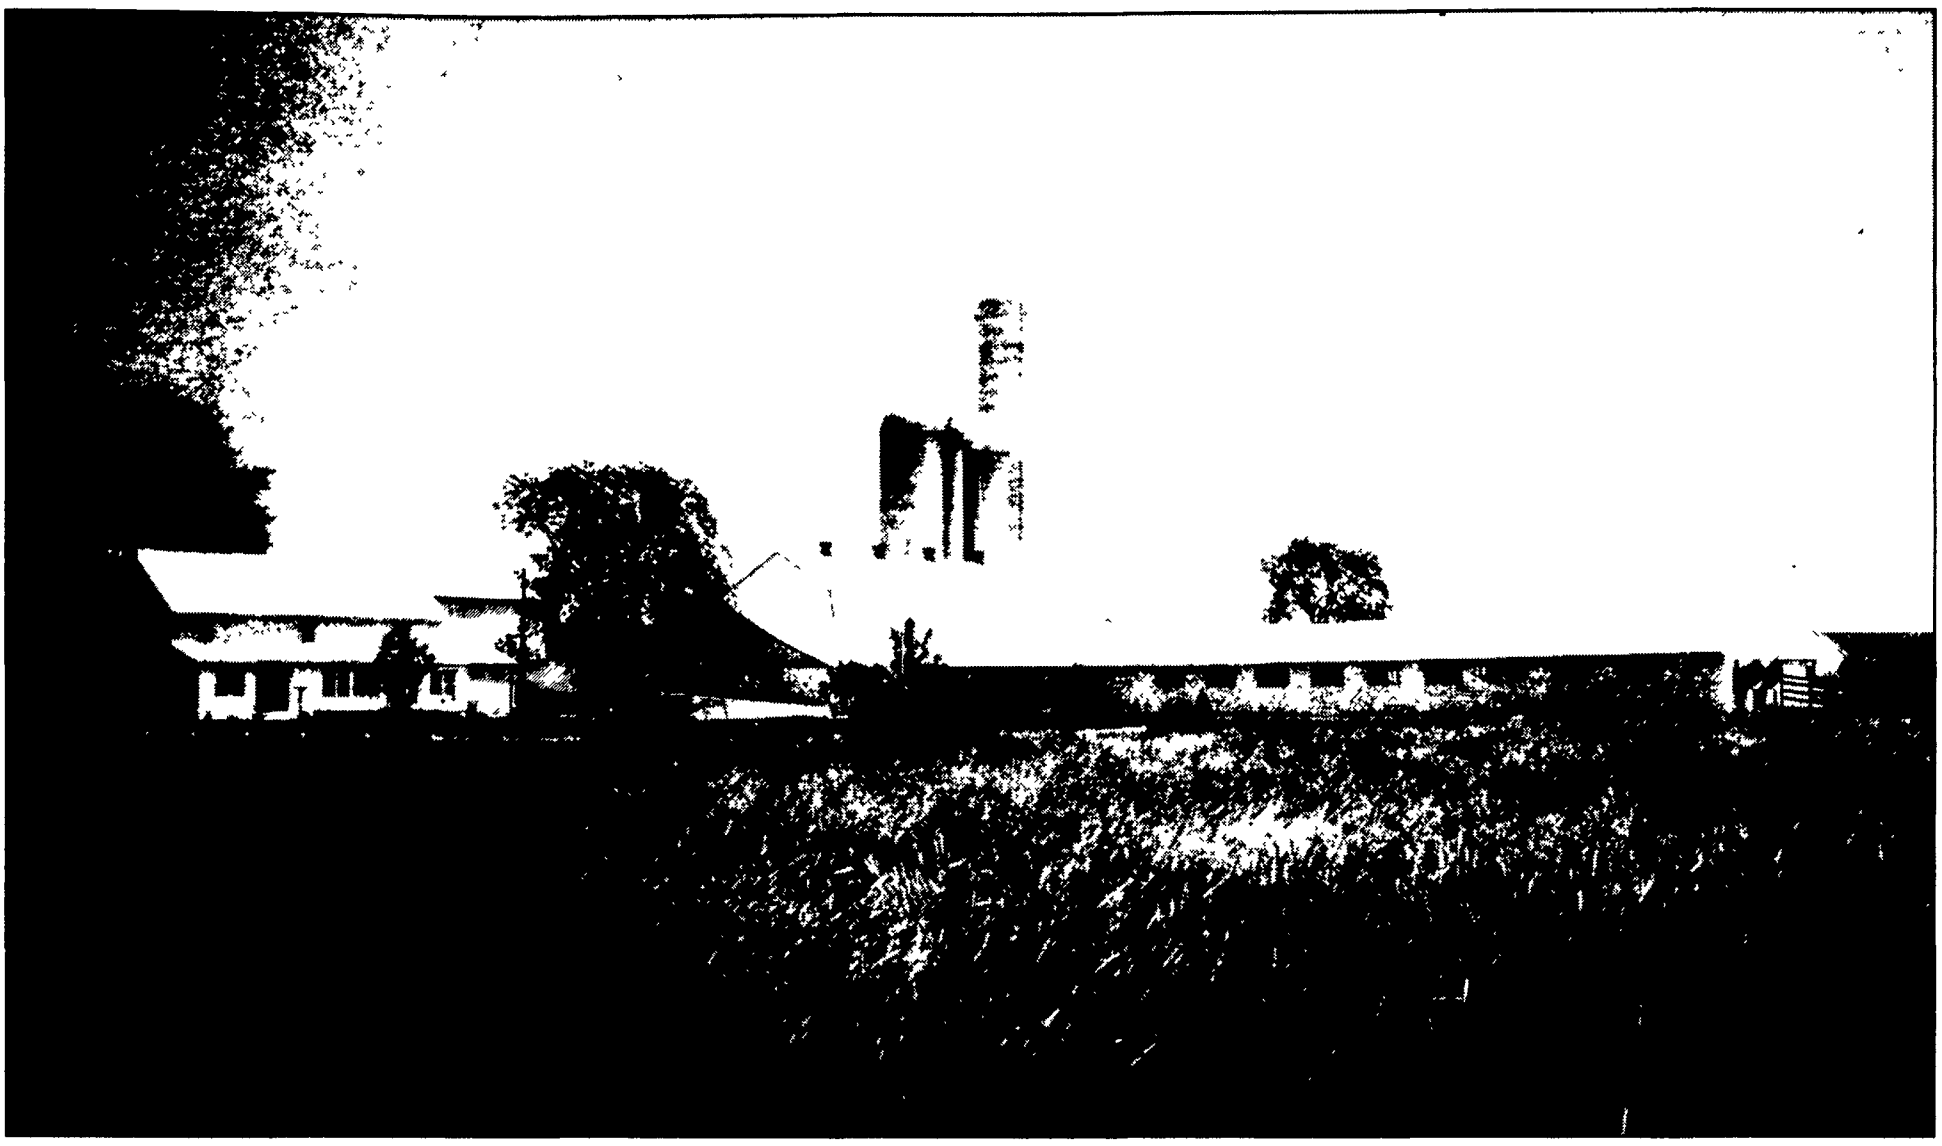
Lebanon County Weaverline Holsteins



Jay and Miriam Weaver and family milk about 100 Holsteins on this scenic dairy near Myerstown in Lebanon County. Along with three hired men, the Weavers manage the herd and farm about 260 acres to provide most of the forages for the cows.

Jay's father originally owned the farm and Jay began milking there before he was married.

Children Randall, 13, and Sheila, 11, pitch in with the farm work and help to keep the grounds tidy and trim. About two months ago, a new son, Jeremy, was born into the Weaver family. He hasn't joined the working crew yet.

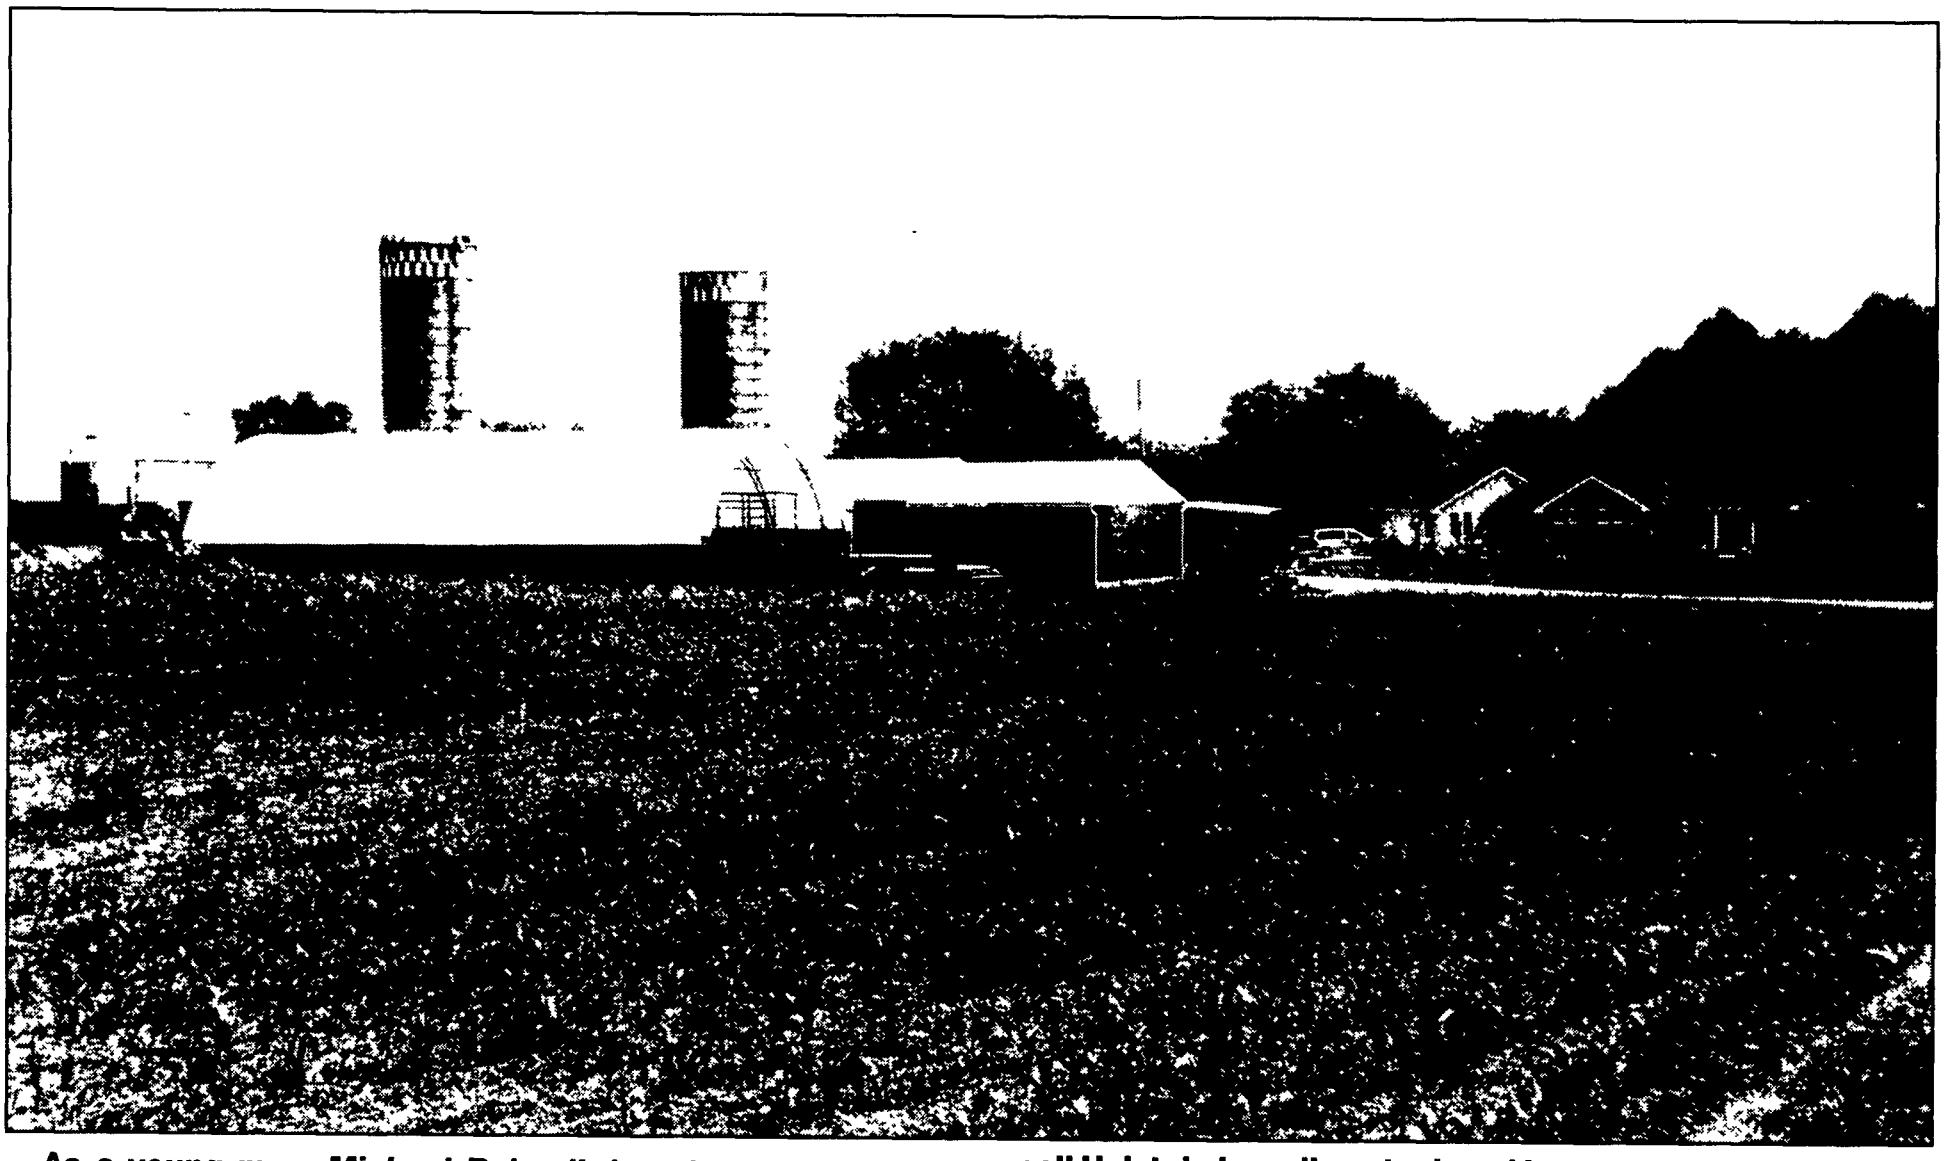
Lawrence County Bohonik Farms



As a young man, Michael Bohonik bought land with "no buildings at all" from his grandfather and constructed his own dairy on it.

Now Bohonik and wife JoAnn milk about 65 Holsteins on their Lawrence County farm.

Besides maintaining the milking herd, the Bohoniks also sell Holstein breeding stock and boasted top cow at the most recent Pennsylvania Holstein Convention.

Bohonik said that running the dairy and keeping the grounds well-groomed requires working "about 20 hours a day."

Dairy of Distinction

Dairy Farm Beautification Program

A Sign Of Pride: Dairy Of Distinction

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — As you drive up the road you notice painted barns, the meticulously trimmed landscaping, the neat fences, the absence of farm machinery in the barnyard, and the scrupulously clean cows.

You note the sense of beauty and pride that is the hallmark of this dairy farmand as you drive closer, you see the proud display of this family's achievement, the Dairy of Distinction sign.

Hundreds of beautiful dairy farms scattered throughout the Northeast have been recognized by the Northeast Dairy Farm Beautification Program (NEDFBF). Established in 1983, the NEDFBP recognizes the hard work and dedication of dairy owner/operators who maintain attractive, well-kept homesteads in an effort to promote a positive dairy industry image. Those deserving of distinction receive the coveted Dairy of Distinction sign to be placed on the roadside of their farmstead.

There are many Northeastern dairy farms that rank as Dairy of Distinction qualifiers. Maybe your farm is one. To apply in Pennsylvania, contact Michael L. O'Connor, Penn State Department of Dairy and Animal Science, 324 Henning Building, University Park, PA 16802, (814) 863-3913, fax (814) 865-7442, or e-mail moconnor@das.psu.edu
